HAPGOOD Says:

France Does Not Want Peace, but Is Inviting Suicide by Her Harassing Treatment of Germany and Russia.

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, July 22.—To be understood, the alarming news from upper Silesia should be read in the light of what is happening in Paris. The situation in Europe is complicated, but the mastering fact is that France does not want peace. The semi-official French monthly bulletin says that it is "almost inevitable" that the Rhineland commission should pass on from the administration of the customs to the administration of the finances. In other words, the customs trick is revealed as the wedge for French operation of that part of Germany.

NORMAN HAPGOOD

The comments of the government-inspired French press on the trials of the German war-criminals is another illustration of the same intention. If the Germans convict and punish one of their own people, the French, instead of rejoicing that no French or British or Italian war-criminals have to be tried, merely scold about the extent of the penalty, and suggest that such light sentences also give an excuse for further aggression against Germany.

EXCUSE FOR AGGRESSION.

So with the attitude toward reparations. The purpose is less to get something for France than to find excuses for weakening Germany. Germany, right and left, is threatened with penalties to which the treaty of peace gave no right whatever.

Poincare, Daudet and the imperialistic and reactionaries generally do not take the trouble to conceal their intention to find every excuse for aggression. A Paris paper thus describes the intention of these men: "They want to cross the Rhine like Louis XIV, and Napoleon for profit and glory."

The statement, however, is an unsympathetic and scarcely fair way of putting it. Profit and glory are not the right words. Their aggression against Germany, whether in the Ruhr or in Silesia, is caused by fear and by little else than fear. They are convinced that the safety of France is to be sought only in the weakening of Germany.

FRANCE INVITING SUICIDE.

Of course it is imbecile, but it is in fact the way they think. At present it seems impossible to do anything with this fear-complex. Any outsider can see that France has much more to hope from a Germany treated with ordinary honesty, if not with liberality, than from a wronged and resentful Germany, but France cannot see it.

France cannot understand that in proving false to her treaty engagements, in making herself more and more imperialistic, in making herself hated in Germany and in Russia, in breaking up her entente with Great Britain, in losing the sympathy of the United States, she is inviting suicide.

In Silesia her policy has amounted to a destruction to have her own way whatever is thought in Great Britain or any other country. Incredible as it seems, she acts on the theory that, having won a war against Germany with the help of Russia, Italy, the United States and Great Britain, she is strong enough to exercise a military control of the continent of Europe.

IS SEEKING DELAY.

The British government is firmly of the opinion that the boundaries of Silesia, Poland and Germany shall be established immediately, and along the lines agreed upon. It is also of the opinion that an end should be put to the so-called "sanctions" on the Ruhr. France is determined in both regions to seek delay in settlement and to seek at every point not the carrying out of agreements but the injury of Germany.

Korfanty, the Polish freelance who has been the tool of Franco-Polish policy in Silesia, on being asked what he thought of the objections of the other powers, shrugged his shoulders and said: "Je m'en fiche du monde entier."

Which being interpreted means: "I tell the whole world to go chase itself."

More specifically he was asked what he thought of Lloyd George. "Je m'en fiche de Lloyd George," he observed. I offer a slightly different translation of the same words: "Lloyd George can go to Hades."

In Upper Silesia the point of contest is of course the mines. A line of division has been drawn by the British commissioner and a line more generous to the Poles has been drawn by the Italians. The objection that has been shown by France to an immediate meeting of the Supreme Council means that she wishes to postpone a settlement of the Silesian situation, unless she can procure a settlement based purely on the desire to weaken Germany.

BANKER LAVISHED MONEY ON SOMERVILLE GIRL, WIFE SAYS

ACCUSES CHORUS BEAUTY

Mrs. Shaw Says Husband Gave Madrienne La Barre $15,000 a Year

Miss Madrienne La Barre of No. 45 Mason street, Somerville, former "butterfly" of the Ziegfeld Follies chorus, now better known by her family name of Dever, has been named as corespondent in a suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Elinor Shaw against Philip M. Shaw, wealthy New York banker and broker.

Mrs. Shaw charges that Miss La Barre, who is twenty-one years old, has been overfriendly with the middle-aged banker since late in 1919. Shaw does not deny the charge.

The wife further complains that while she is now without funds her husband has lavished money upon Miss La Barre and her mother, Mrs. Ella F. Dever, spending at the rate of $15,000 a year when his alleged infatuation was at its height.

WIFE DESTITUTE.

"I have no doubt my husband will do everything possible to protect the good name of his mistress," says the banker's wife.

Harding to Camp Out with Firestone, Ford and Edison

By International News Service.

Washington, July 22.—President Harding has made tentative plans to leave Washington tomorrow for Sharpsburg, Md., to spend the night in the hills as the guest of Harvey S. Firestone, rubber manufacturer, of Akron, O., it was learned at the White House today.

Henry Ford, Detroit auto manufacturer, and Thomas A. Edison will also be present at the Firestone camp.

NEEDHAM MAN APPEALS THREE AUTO SENTENCES

Charles C. Nichols, of No. 16 Rosemary street, Needham, was found guilty by Judge Sullivan in Charlestown Court today of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. Found guilty of operating without proper lights, he was fined $10, and on a charge of drunkenness $5. Nichols appealed all three sentences and was held in $400.

CHARGE 17-YEAR-OLD BOY TRIED TO ROB POOR BOX

Melvin Hicks, 17 years old, of Bernard street, Dorchester, was held in $500 in Roxbury Court today till July 26 on the charge of attempt to rifle a poor box in St. Joseph's Church, Circuit street, Roxbury. It is asserted that Hicks was discovered by the janitress of the church trying to open the box with a key. She summoned a priest, who held Hicks until the arrival of the police, it is stated.

RAIN RAISES PRICES OF BEANS AND BERRIES

String beans went up in price today in the markets.

Yesterday three quarts were selling for 25 cents, but today it's two quarts for a quarter.

Braves Field, July 22.—A great throng turned out today to watch the Braves and Pirates engage in a double-header. It was the largest week day gathering in the history of the park during the regular National League season.

The fans realize that the pennant fate of the Braves depends upon the results of this clash with the leaders, and there was tremendous enthusiasm as the Braves trotted on to the field to start the initial game.

An even break today, and good baseball by the Mitchmen, will mean a capacity crowd for tomorrow's double bill, which concludes the engagement with the Pirates.

FIRST GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Pirates—Bigbee walked. Carey lifted to Southworth. McQuillan toed out Maranville. Bigbee going to second. Cutshaw flied to Powell. NO RUNS.

Braves—Powell hit to Hamilton, who beat the runner to the bag. Barbare walked. Southworth popped to Hamilton. Maranville threw out Nicholson. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Pirates—McQuillan stopped Robertson's hard smash and threw him out. Barnhart walked. Grimm doubled to Powell. Barnhart stole second. Schmidt struck out. NO RUNS.

AUTOIST CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

Patrolman James T. Welch of Black Bay station testified in Roxbury Court today that Theodore Flowers of Gainsboro street, Back Bay, arrested on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, tried to bribe him to drop the case by offering $50. Flowers pleaded not guilty and his case was continued till July 26.

EUROPE TOO POOR TO BUY CLOTHING

Washington, July 22.—Eastern and Central Europe is nearer nakedness than at any time since the Napoleonic wars, according to a report made public today by the American Red Cross. Depreciation of currency is given as the chief reason for the inability of the Europeans to buy clothing.

De Valera Returns to Ireland; Lloyd George Plan Before Ulster's Cabinet

By International News Service.

London, July 22.—Eamon de Valera, President of the Irish Republic, returned to Ireland today to put the English government's peace offer directly up to the Sinn Fein Parliament (Dail Eireann).

"Though the immediate future is uncertain, we have perfect confidence in the ultimate success of our cause," said De Valera, before departing for Dublin.

Lloyd George communicated to the Ulster government the proposals regarding Irish peace submitted to him by De Valera, and the Ulster Premier, Sir James Craig, read them to his Cabinet at Belfast.

No action was taken on them, however, according to a dispatch from that city.

Late this afternoon it was stated that General Smuts had postponed his prospect Irish visit until next week.

The Irish President got an enthusiastic send-off at the railway station. There was a large crowd of friends and sympathizers, as well as many who were present out of curiosity. Some of the Irishmen in the crowd carried Sinn Fein flags.

The whole republic peace delegation returned, with the exception of Art O'Brien, head of the Irish Self-Determination League, whose duties as Sinn Fein ambassador to London made his presence necessary.

De Valera made a short speech from the train, asking the crowd for their sympathy towards the Irish cause.

Despite the temporary suspension of peace negotiations, the Irish armistice continues in effect. It is reported, however, that the general staff of the Irish republican army is taking steps to renew guerilla warfare if the negotiations collapse entirely.

The Exchange Telegraph says that the government will not publish the text of the Irish proposals until De Valera has had an opportunity to consult with his colleagues and sends a reply to London. Then Premier Lloyd George will make a detailed statement in Commons. The Exchange Telegraph learns that formal negotiations may start next week.

$5,000,000 BONDS FOR GEN. TAYLOR'S EXECUTORS

The will of Gen. Charles H. Taylor has been allowed by the Suffolk County Probate Court, and Frederic E. Snow, Matthew C. Armstrong and William O. Taylor have, as executors, each given a bond for $5,000,000. The size of the bond gives an idea of the value of Gen. Taylor's estate, but the actual amount left by him will not be disclosed until the inventory is filed. The executors under the law have three months in which to file that document.

WHISKEY FLEET OFF ATLANTIC COAST

Washington, July 22.—Mystery ships which have been reported off the Atlantic seaboard recently were undoubtedly part of a "whiskey fleet," according to government officials.

The bureau of navigation of the Department of Commerce, in view of the apparently well-founded reports of a "floating bar" off Long Island, is now proceeding in its investigation of the reports of a pirate craft on the theory that the secret of a storm the reported sailing thirst parlor would legally put into any American port for a period of twenty-four hours free from search or seizure, officials of the treasury believe.

SAYS TUFTS GAVE $150 TO STILL CIENT STORY

Attorney Johnston Testifies Money Was Paid to Settle "Auto Ring" Cases

Testimony was given in the trial of District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts today in the case of "Sir" Thomas Mozette, trance medium and impostor, whom District Attorney Tufts is accused of having shielded by causing a larceny complaint against him to be nol prossed. First witness was Mrs. Justine Gordon, now of Somerville, who alleged that the "medium" duped her out of $11,155. She said that following Mozette's flight she retained Attorney Harry E. Levenson to trace him. Levenson was recommended to her by a man in Mozette's office.

Testimony that District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts gave his personal check for $150 to satisfy a citizen who was clamoring for the prosecution of an auto thief was the feature of the trial of Tufts by the Supreme Court today in charges of malfeasance.

Attorney John C. Johnston of Brookline was the accusing witness and said the man who got the check was a client of his.

Johnston also testified that he, too, had heard ugly rumors at the time of the activities of the auto theft ring to the effect that these malefactors could not be "reached" in Middlesex County.

He had heard that the leaders of the gang were boasting they were beyond the law so long as they confined operations to Middlesex, Johnston added. He told Tufts of these disquieting reports and implored him to give the lie to them by strenuous prosecution.

Johnston was one of the principal witnesses today, testifying as to allegation 20, which charges that Tufts was instrumental in getting money as "restitution" for persons who were demanding the auto gang be broken up and who were losers by its activities.

Sergeant Timothy J. Sheehan of the Boston police also gave important testimony regarding a conference at

OFFICIALS DOUBTFUL OF THEFT STORY

Probe of Tale Told by Allen Agents of Robbery of Mishawum Papers Is Dropped

Despite the sensational story of a hold-up and robbery of valuable papers told by two agents of Attorney-General J. Weston Allen, the police of Lawrence, Haverhill and Methuen dropped the case today.

They declared that their investigations had revealed nothing that would tend to confirm the colorful tale related by Thomas H. Holmes of No. 2 Orient street, East Boston, and George E. Kelley of Wakefield.

The papers of which the men claimed to have been robbed, were said to have contained a deposition from "Brownie" Kenney, former mistress of Mishawum Manor.

The story, varying in many details, was told the police of Lawrence and Haverhill, as well as Attorney-General Allen, by the detectives.

Both men declared that Kelley had shot and seriously wounded one of the bandits as they were making their escape, and Holmes expressed the opinion that the man was killed.

A widespread search for the desperadoes was made by the police, without success, and according to Captain Sullivan of Haverhill no marks were found on the Methuen road to indicate that a holdup had occurred.

Attorney-General Allen, while admitting that Holmes had been deputized by him to work on "a certain angle of the Tufts case," and that the latter had telephoned him early today, refused to make a statement until he had talked with the detectives.

NOT IN HAVERHILL.

He scoffed at the police theory that "Brownie" Kennedy, whose where-

BROWNIE'S STORY IS SEIZED

ebents have been shrouded in mystery, was in Haverhill, and said that so far as he knew she had not appeared in Essex County.

Holmes and Kelley drove up to the Haverhill police station at 1:20 a. m. today and Kelley reported to Captain Sullivan that they had been held up on Howe road, at the corner of North street, in Methuen.

He said they were agents of Attorney-General Allen and were returning to Boston from Haverhill with affidavits in connection with the case against District Attorney Nathan P. Tufts of Middlesex.

According to Captain Sullivan, the story told him by Kelley differed considerably from that related by the men to the Lawrence authorities.

Captain Sullivan quoted Kelley as saying the two men had gone to Haverhill to obtain an affidavit from a woman, and that they did not realize that city until 11 o'clock. They did not say who the woman was, according to Captain Sullivan.

It was later learned that Holmes volunteered his services to Attorney-General Allen, stating that he could obtain evidence on a "certain angle of the case." He was permitted to go ahead, and reported from time to time to the attorney-general.

The detective said that they were on Howe road, Methuen, about 12:30, having lost their way. A big car, Kelley declared, was drawn up across the road.

The detective machine was brought to a stop, according to his story, and three men, all armed with revolvers, stepped out of the shadows and demanded that Holmes and Kelley leave the car.

HELD WITH BLACKJACK.

Kelley said that he drew his revolver and fired, but that he was struck over the head from behind with a blackjack, his gun falling from his hand.

Mrs. Janice Davis, who lives in a bungalow on Lowell street, near the Methuen line, telephoned the Haverhill police that an automobile containing two men had driven by, broken up the road and stopped near her house about ten o'clock. The speed with the car remained there two hours, she declared, when it moved on again after midnight. The woman said she heard the voices of men in the car, but was unable to distinguish many.

According to the Lawrence police, Holmes said last night that he had registered at Lawrence between eight and nine o'clock last night, and then drove to Haverhill, where they waited for the train from Boston at the Boston & Maine station. They left the police a man for whom they had been looking out of this city, and had him sign an affidavit which he had brought from New York.

Kelley, Holmes said, that he had neglected to bring a second affidavit and that it would be necessary for him to return to New York for it.

Holmes said they then started for Boston, reaching Lowell street on the Joldup about 12:20. He said that when the men met Kelley they pressed them into Lawrence, losing their car at River street. According to the police the detectives failed to explain the fact that they did not reach the Haverhill police station until an hour later than the time of the alleged holdup.

CONFLICTING STORIES

Holmes displayed credentials from the Attorney-General's office to both Haverhill and Lawrence police, but Kelley had none.

Police from both cities hurried to the scene of the holdup, but found no unusual marks on the road, nor the revolver which Kelley said he had dropped. They pointed out that Kelley told conflicting stories, to one claiming that he was blackjacked from behind, while in the other he said he was struck in the face and had a tooth loosened.

The Lawrence police said Holmes telephoned Attorney-General Allen, announcing "The papers you're looking for have been found. I will see you in Boston and give you the facts." The Lawrence police refused to tell the city.

Later Attorney-General Allen made the following statement:

"I am too busy now to make any statement about the affair in detail. It is true that I authorized Holmes to act as a representative of my department to secure certain information which he said he could get for me. I have heard from him two or three times, the last time about two days ago."

ALLEN SILENT.

"I got a telephone call from him late last night. Further than that I don't care to discuss the matter."

Asked if the witness for whom Holmes was searching was Brownie Kennedy, the Attorney-General said: "I prefer to say nothing about it at such time as I can make a full statement."

For several days past it has been rumored that Brownie Kennedy was in or near Haverhill, stopping with friends. It was further stated that he made several trips to Boston and consulted a lawyer known to representative figures in the underworld of this city.

It is believed that Holmes learned of her presence and went to Haverhill to obtain an affidavit. The police were frankly skeptical of his story concerning the man from New York who rode to Haverhill to turn over a paper.

District Attorney Tufts, when informed of the holdup story, said: "I don't know anything more than that I saw in the papers. It looks to me to be along the line of other fake stories told in connection with my case. I had nothing to do with it in any way."

Ardent "butterfly" letters from the ex-chorus girl to her banker lover will be exhibits in the suit, which threatens to rival the Stillman case. Here is one of the letters submitted by the wife:

A "BUTTERFLY" LETTER.

"My Darling Sweetheart — If seems at these times, when my greatest trials and tribulations come, you are never near me, to cheer, comfort and help me. Just think, to have a sweetheart and to be engaged to be married and at a time like this not to be even able to reach him by telephone or wire.

"Mama and I just received word that Aunt Josie is to undergo an operation on Tuesday morning. It is just a sort of chance, and we want to be near her to give her every sort of encouragement. It would be so sweet if you would write her some sort of a cheery note—she has grown so fond of you and always writes so sweetly of you. She feels confidence in you and is sure how happy we will be.

"Please do this, dearest. Much love, dearest, from your loving little sweetheart.

"MADRIENNE-BUTTERFLY."

CLAIMS MARRIAGE ILLEGAL.

While the divorce suit of Mrs. Shaw was brought in New York, all the parties but Shaw are well known in Boston.

Mrs. Shaw, a strikingly beautiful woman of early middle age, is the daughter of a prominent Boston family and the former wife of William Meserve Jordan.

She was divorced from Jordan, and part of her husband's defense will be that this decree was only interlocutory, and that before it was made final by the Middlesex County Court she married him.

In other words, that the woman with whom he has lived since 1902 is not his wife legally and cannot sue him for divorce.

Miss La Barre, whose family name is Devee, and who also has been known as Madrienne Le Bane, Madeline Lovejoy and "Butterfly," is fairly well known in Somerville. For the past year she and her mother have been living quietly at No. 45 Mason street in Somerville.

Mrs. Shaw alleges that the rental of the Mason street house was at one time, if not at present, paid by her husband. Shaw himself is a member of Philip M. Shaw & Co., note brokers at No. 15 William street, New York. He is rated a millionaire by the financial agencies.

SAYS SHAW LAVISHED MONEY

Mrs. Shaw charges that the intimacy between her husband and the "butterfly," Miss La Barre, began back in 1919, and that Shaw was guilty of misconduct at a hotel in Somerville on December 5 of that year and on subsequent dates. This intimacy, she charges, was continued at the Hotel Woodward in New York, where the banker is said to have established the "butterfly" in a costly suite. She lived at the Woodward from December, 1919, until June, 1920, according to Mrs. Shaw, and Shaw paid the bills.

During this period, it is alleged, Mrs. Devee frequently visited her daughter and Mr. Shaw and some of the mother's bills are alleged to have been met by the banker.

Mrs. Shaw says in her divorce action that although her marriage to Shaw was not blessed with children they were very happy until Madrienne La Barre, "butterfly" and sometime chorus girl, came into their lives.

From that moment, she alleges, Shaw began to neglect her, his wife, money and $7,500 counsel fees.

MOORE PICKFORD TANGLE MAY BE MORE TANGLED

If Nevada Court Annuls Divorce, Both Parties Will Have Two Spouses

San Francisco, July 22.—The marriage of Owen Moore a few days ago to Katherine Perry, movie star, may further complicate the marital tangle of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, supposing the Nevada Supreme Court should rule in favor of Attorney-General Fowler of Nevada, who is still trying to knock out the Pickford-Moore divorce decree.

Up to the present time Mary has won out on every point, and apparently is not worrying much, but the case offers interesting possibilities.

If the Supreme Court holds that the Attorney-General has a right to have the divorce case reopened, then the suit brought by the State to annul the divorce will go to trial on its merits before a district court.

No matter which way the district court decides the case will again go to the Supreme Court for final action, and if the Supreme Court should hold that the divorce was obtained fraudulently and annul it, then what?

Mary would have two husbands, Owen Moore two wives.

That would end the case as far as Fowler is concerned, he says, and it would then be up to the State of California to straighten out the marriage tangle as best it could, while some other State would have the privilege of helping Moore untangle himself from the web.

EXCESS IMMIGRANTS ADMITTED PROVISIONALLY

Washington, July 22.—Secretary of Labor Davis has ordered immigration officials at Ellis Island to admit provisionally all immigrants who have arrived in excess of the July quotas.

Thus far, according to Commissioner-General Husband, 200 have arrived in excess of the quotas permitted under the Johnson act. They are from Turkey, Palestine and Greece.

It is expected that the immigrants so admitted this month, in addition to 5,000 similarly admitted during June, will exhaust the quotas to remain.

By HAZEL CANNING.

Thomas J. McLoughlin, New York father, has petitioned Surrogate Cohalan for $6,000 a year from the annual income of his son's estate for the son's support.

Forty dollars weekly—his own wage, McLoughlin adds, is altogether insufficient for the support of his boy. Therefore his appeal for $6,000 yearly.

In his estimate, McLoughlin makes several interesting items.

This list of Biscuit Maker McLoughlin was cited to Mrs. Eliot Enheking Long, wife of Professor Long, and official of the Hyde Park League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Long, as the mother of two boys, sixteen and fourteen, is in a position to quote figures with the man in New York. Mrs. Long did quote figures—and facts. Her facts, however, hardly coincide with the man from New York.

TOO MUCH FOR PLEASURE.

"First of all," explained Mrs. Long, "I should say that that New York father was wrong regarding the too much—the high cost of pleasure, rather than his estimate for boys.

No youngster ever found fun by purchasing it with so many pennies, or dollars or hundreds of dollars. The children of a larger growth have learned, sometimes in bitterness and tears, that fun is not bought with money.

"Therefore, I think that any such sum as $600 for a vacation; $300 for spending money; $250 for amusements, is misspent money. All these dollars would only make the child restless, blase, unthankful, a hardened little wording, before his time.

DOLLAR A WEEK TO SPEND.

"Now my boys are given, until just lately, $1 a week for spending money. And, my dear, you would just open your eyes if you could see what those youngsters made their dollar go.

"First, they were interested in wireless. So they spent at least half of their dollars every week for some new equipment for their wireless instruments.

"This was not only fun—it was education, for it was the very best kind of education in the world. It was teaching the boys how to educate themselves, and I think it was giving them their fun at home.

"There is nothing more important with growing boys than to encourage them to find their joy in their homes and in their homes.

MAKE OUR OWN TOYS.

"Now I see that the New York gentleman quotes large sums for athletic accessories, for baseball bats and the like. Those sums are quite unnecessary. Such large quantities of money merely handed out to a child crushes his ingenuity and ruin his self help. We teach our boys to make their own things.

"My oldest son, at school, was given permission to use spare periods in the manual training rooms, making various things to be used for scouting.

"In fact, as foil to the New York man's '$250 for amusements,' I would substitute 'four weeks to keep the boy busy.' My boys keep busy with a garden in the back yard, where they raise vegetables with skill surprising for youngsters of their age.

DEVELOPS CHARACTER.

"The garden brings in money instead of costing it all out. But, more than the commercial return, is the training in honesty, persistence of character, knowledge of the value of growing things, which a garden gives a boy.

"Then, for other pleasures, my boys save pennies to make a walking trip to Plymouth this Summer. Or their father, Professor Long. They will store overnight at farmhouses and bring down the cost of living this way.

"Last year they went on a bicycle trip with their father to the White Mountains. Don't you suppose those youngsters got more comradeship with their father, more of nature, more of good sportsmanship and fun this way than if they had taken the trip rolling in a limousine, driven by a uniformed chauffeur?

"I'm sure they did. And, in getting more fun, they also get more character, more ingenuity, more patience, and a more intimate knowledge of the rubs of life.

SPEND WITH SYSTEM.

"After all, in apportioning our money upon our dear children, we should have one end in view. How are we going to spend our dollars to get back for our boys character, cheerfulness, patience, good temper, strength of mind and body?

"The answer is readily given.

"We can get these things for our boys by helping them to help themselves. These thousand youngsters of ours ultimately will have to stand on their own feet.

"Therefore, while still under the guidance of their good father, let him with them stand together, let them exercise their own strength, because strength grows only as it is exercised. Let them learn the happiness by forgetting happiness. Which is the only way happiness comes.

SIMPLICITY FIRST.

"And, above all, let our boys grow up simply enough to be un-self-conscious. For a man grown, conscious of himself, is a bore. But a boy, growing, conscious of himself, is an arrant bore.

"And, from boredom of themselves or others, let us deliver our children, for all time, by giving them in youth the proper discipline, the proper love, the proper work and the proper play."

MRS. ELIOT ENNEKING LONG

Mrs. Long disagrees with the New York father who told the court he needed $6,000 a year to bring up his son. Less money and more work to keep the growing boy busy would be better for the development of character, Mrs. Long says.

TWO BUDGETS FOR GROWING BOY

1—$600 for a Summer vacation.
2—$300 for spending money.
3—$250 for amusements.
4—$75 for church and charities.
5—$35 for ice skates and running shoes.
6—$40 for athletic goods, baseballs, bats and gloves.

Items of the lavish yearly estimate for support of fourteen-year-old boy, as quoted by his father, Thomas J. McLoughlin.

1—For Summer vacation, a walking trip to Plymouth, stopping at farm houses overnight.
2—For spending money—$1 a week.
3—For amusements—a wireless outfit, paid for out of the $1 weekly spending money.
4—Church and charity money—taken from weekly dollar or raised by private enterprises of the boys.
5—A substitute for athletic goods various pleasures, costing nothing, devised by the boys' own ingenuity.
6—Instead of skates, etc., substitute a bicycle trip to the White Mountains with their father.

Items in the life program of the fourteen and sixteen-year-old sons of Mrs. Eliot Enneking Long, substituting ingenuity for dollars.

TENEMENT SEEN AS 'BLACK BEAST' OF BOSTON

"The tenement in Boston is the black beast that must be killed as soon as possible."

This is the statement made by the Rev. Edward H. Cotton, a Unitarian minister of Boston, after visiting the North End and studying the conditions of people living in that congested section of this city.

He thinks that North End children are not vicious, though they may be at times mischievous.

"They are well brought up, although you might not think so from their dirty faces and rags," he said.

PLAY ON STREETS.

"The only place they have to play is on the pavements and brick side walks. There are playgrounds, but they are too far away. It is impossible to keep children off the streets when they have nowhere else to go, for the street is the only place these children have to go.

"I notice among these children there were none with rosy cheeks; they knew nothing of the playgrounds with trees and green fields, brooks and woods. Many of them are growing up to manhood and womanhood without any particle of recreation which is essential to physical, mental and moral well being."

WOULD RAZE TENEMENTS.

This clergyman is trying to devise some plan to raze the tenements and plant grass plots and trees where they stood.

"Any one of the christian denominations of Boston," he said, "if it would resolutely take hold of the problem, could create an irresistible sentiment in favor of correction, which would eliminate the congested tenement as the slum was eliminated."

MRS. DUMAINE CAN'T LIVE ON $833 A MONTH

Mrs. Elizabeth Dumaine of Concord is unable to live on $833.33 a month because of her station in life, according to a petition she filed through her attorney, Joseph G. Kelly of Boston, against Frederick Dumaine of Concord in the East Cambridge Divorce Court today. The papers show the Dumaines were married in Boston on April 13, 1895.

She obtained a divorce from Dumaine on June 6, 1919, on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. The divorce became absolute December 7, 1919. She alleges that Dumaine is worth $2,000,000 and has an income of $150,000 a year. She asks that the decree be revoked and that the amount of money she was awarded be increased.

At the time of the divorce it was uncontested. She was represented by Attorney Daniel H. Coakley of Boston. The court decreed that she should receive alimony totalling $10,000 and the further sum of $833.33 a month.

MOVIE PERMIT REFUSED IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS

The Arlington Board of Selectmen has turned down the petition signed by several hundred residents of Arlington Heights asking that a moving picture permit be granted to show pictures in Crescent Hall, Arlington Heights.

OFFICIALS LOSE EVIDENCE IN 2 LIQUOR CASES

Holyoke Shipments Disappear on Way to Laboratory for Analysis

Sleuths of the Department of Public Health and State police are searching for the person or persons who stole two packages of liquor delivered to the main office of the department last month, as a result of which the evidence of the Holyoke police in two liquor cases has been lost and the defendants may possibly be released by the court.

According to information obtained at the department a package from Chief of Police William D. Nolen was delivered by an expressman on June 2 and another on June 11. Both packages were received by women clerks in the office.

SENT TO LABORATORY.

After the goods were signed for in the main office the packages were supposed to have been sent to Director Lythgo for laboratory analysis. The two packages never were received at the laboratory, Director Lythgo says.

The first Director Lythgo knew of the packages being sent was when Chief Nolen asked for the result of the analysis. Investigation showed that the packages had been received and signed for by the women clerks and never received by any official of the department.

Director Lythgo has received thus far this year 1,600 samples of liquor from the police departments of the State and this is the second lot stolen. The first was a sample submitted by the Boston police and had been analyzed when stolen.

LIQUOR NOT ANALYZED.

The State chemist appeared in court and the man was convicted without the evidence of the liquor, but in the Holyoke case the liquor was stolen before being analyzed.

Prohibition Gauger H. D. Stebbins has reported that 1,345 gallons of 191 proof alcohol is missing from the shipment of alcohol originally seized by the prohibition agents from the bark Thomas. The original order for the boat was said to be in 250 drums, with a capacity of 110 gallons each. It was found that some of the drums had been filled with water.

WITHDRAW WRIT OF SUIT AGAINST J. E. BRADSHAW

In a letter to Attorney-at-Law Murray Howe for J. Edwin Bradshaw, Liquidator Agent John E. Hannigan of the Prohibition Service Company states that publication of the charges in that line trust companies had brought suit against Mr. Bradshaw was an error. Mr. Hannigan explained that after the case was brought he concluded there was a mistake and withdrew the writ for prosecution of Mr. Bradshaw. Through some misunderstanding, he said, the proper procedure was not followed in the clerk's office.

FAKED WOUND, SAYS MRS. LINNELL

Husband Not Hit, She Asserts. Describes Her Married Life as "Hell"

Springfield, July 21.—Mrs. Laura Linnell, society woman and leader in the city's largest charity movements, who was released in the local court under $500 bail on a charge of shooting her husband, Stewart F. Linnell, prominent manufacturer, accuses him of "faking" the wound in his leg.

In an exclusive interview today with the Boston American she admitted that she fired a shot, but declared that she aimed at the floor to frighten him.

SAYS BULLET ENTERED FLOOR.

"The bullet did not go into his leg," she declared. "It went into the floor. The bullet wound is only a bluff."

In the interview she told of her married life, which she described as "a perfect hell," and related in detail the facts which immediately preceded the shooting.

Her love for Linnell's own twelve-year-old daughter, Gladys, she declares, was the motive which led her to point a gun in the direction of her husband and to fire it when he persisted in going into his daughter's room to get some of her clothing and trinkets.

Mrs. Linnell, an attractive young woman of thirty-five, is a former divorcee.

"Four three years' married life has been a stormy one because Mr. Linnell persisted in being the boss," she said.

STINTED, WIFE CHARGES.

"He is wealthy, owns a huge house and employs a chauffeur and maid, and yet he has tried to dole out money to me as if I were a small child. He has stinted me and his children under the pretence of economizing and yet I have known him to spend money recklessly on himself.

"He has only bought me one suit in three years and only two hats. To get gifts on holidays I have forced to do dressmaking and all the time he expected me to keep up my club work, and my charity work and ride in his big machine behind a chauffeur.

"In general I resented his protest against his treatment he would fly into tantrums. His tantrums took the form of packing up his belongings and pretending to leave the house.

"On Thursday, June 16, after one of these tantrums, I went to my room to let her father go into his bed and touch her clothing or trinkets if he should become enraged. She feared he would hurt them.

FIRED TO FRIGHTEN.

"It was because I respected her and knew she feared me that I love his daughter more than he does that I tried to stop him when he started into her room.

"I blocked his way. He then went into his room and came out with something in his hand. I thought he was going to strike me, as he has done many times before, so to frighten him, I fired at the floor."

CONNOLLY TELLS OF SLAYING

Tragic Death of Lord Mayor O'Callaghan Related by Heroic Wife

TORTURED IRELAND

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY,
Famous New England Author and Journalist.

I called upon the widow of Lord Mayor O'Callaghan while I was in Limerick. I passed through the hall where he was murdered and where she was assaulted defending him. I passed on into the drawing room and met her, a tall, lovely young woman, dark hair, dark eyes and ivory skin with a blush on it. A cultured, educated woman.

She spoke of her husband with a quiver in her voice, but without tears. The bereaved women of Ireland are allowing themselves no tears—this feeling I found everywhere there; the most tortured body of women in all the world perhaps are allowing themselves no tears till the great work is done.

She even smiled, as they all do when they greet you and tell you of the Terror—but as she stood there, she was the embodied Dark Hesaiaen of Irish tragic song and story.

"CREDIT FOR THE LOOT."

Later we were in the living room and her sister had joined us. I asked if I might smoke a cigar. She said, "surely," and got up to get an ash tray. The ash tray was on the mantel and above the mantel was a portrait of her murdered husband, murdered in the hall a dozen feet away.

He was a witty and most likeable man, according to all accounts, and a fine looking man in his thirties, according to his portrait.

He was the man I may have already told of who on being told—"God is dead and we killed him!" said to this fanatic creature, "Indeed! Did you kill him trying to escape?"

It was he as Mayor of Limerick when the new budget for the police came in, including Black and Tans, and an alderman called attention to it, "Your worship, look here —the police department call for less than last year—how's that?"

"They must be giving the city credit for some of the loot," said O'Callaghan.

On the ash tray were two pipes, and as I looked I saw that not ashes but dust lay on the ash tray. Disturbing the dust no more than she could help, Mrs. O'Callaghan placed the ash tray on the table at my elbow, saying as she did so, "This house has not been used to tobacco smoke of late." She smiled —always these unbeatable women smile—but tears when would have been easier to see.

There was a tremendous funeral in Limerick for the murdered men. It was for attending this funeral in Limerick that Colonel Moore, excommander of the Connaught Rangers, was arrested and ridden as a hostage through the streets of Dublin.

The military had to take notice. There was what they called a "public inquiry" which was to be "as open and public as possible." It was about as open and public as all these military inquiries are in Ireland. Armed troops surrounded the Court House, armed troops held the adjacent streets, no one was allowed to get anywhere near the Court House unless he held a permit from General Cameron.

The "public inquiry" was the usual military farce. The people of Limerick only smiled at an inquiry, which tried to show that O'Callaghan and Clancy might have been killed by "the extreme section of the Irish Republican Army."

A fine thing to try to prove of a man who had been unanimously elected Mayor by the Irish Republican corporation of Limerick, who had been threatened time and again with death by Crown soldiery, whose home had been guarded by extremists (i. e., I. R. A. men) until the establishment of martial law, an hour meant certain death for the guard, and O'Callaghan himself ordered them to disperse.

It was of O'Callaghan and Clancy that a Sinn Fein leader said in public, "The one is the brain and the other is the heart of the Republican movement in Limerick."

WIDOW'S ANSWER.

Mrs. O'Callaghan showed herself to be as brave a woman after her husband's death as during the slaughter of him by the gunmen.

When, after the time-worn manner of the English bureaucrat who has achieved his object and can now afford to be generous—generous with words—General Cameron paid tribute to the character of the dead.

Mrs. O'Callaghan replied to that tribute with: "General Cameron's tribute to the dead may be sincere, but I should like to put on record the kind of tribute which the forces of the Crown paid to the dead while they lived."

She then detailed the times her home and Mrs. Clancy's home had been raided, of the threats of death of her husband and Clancy by the military, of the indignities and loss of property by looting during one particular raid to which they had been subjected during those raids.

To General Cameron's invitation to attend the inquiry she replied: "My husband was murdered while the city was completely in the hands of the curfew troops; when he entered, not even the priest or doctor who attended him, could be on the street without peril to their lives. You invite me to attend a military inquiry which sets up as a tribunal of investigation a section of the very Crown forces who held the city absolutely in their hands when the murder was done.

"Disguised men in civilian clothes were allowed to move through the streets of the city on that night without being challenged by your patrols. You call the inquiry a public one and yet take extraordinary precautions, military and otherwise, to ensure that it shall not be public.

PROFESSIONAL GUNMEN.

"You tried to charge the Extremists of the I. R. A. with the murder of my husband. It was I. R. A. men who guarded him for as long a time as he would let them. While under the protection of the I. R. A. no harm came to us, thank God. They did their duty well; it is one of my proud and consoling memories that they guarded him living and dead.

"In my agony that night I thought of the countless other women suffering as I suffered in my husband's threatened life and death. For their sakes I demand a full and open inquiry before a jury of my countrymen and countrywomen into the murder of my husband."

Mrs. O'Callaghan's Answer to Tribute of Cameron

Mrs. O'Callaghan, wife of the slain lord mayor of Limerick, showed herself to be as brave a woman after her husband's death as during the slaughter of him by the gunmen.

When, after the time-worn manner of the English bureaucrat who has achieved his object and can now afford to be generous with words—General Cameron paid tribute to the character of the dead.

Mrs. O'Callaghan replied: "General Cameron's tribute to the dead may be sincere, but I should like to put on record the kind of tribute which the forces of the Crown paid to the dead while they lived."

STATE'S CASE AGAINST SOX NEAR CLOSE

Fight Expected Over Admission of Cicotte, Williams and Jackson Confessions

Chicago, July 22.—The case of the State against the "Black Sox" and gamblers indicted for conspiracy to throw the 1919 world's series was believed to be near its close today.

With the conclusion of the testimony of "Hill" Burns, former big league pitcher and star witness for the State, it was believed that only a few more witnesses would be called to testify for the prosecution.

Then the fight still looming for the State is the battle for the admission as evidence of the confessions of Eddie Cicotte, Claude Williams and Joe Jackson before the Grand Jury. It is not known definitely how any of this issue will be injected into the trial.

Attorneys for the State were jubilant today over their victory in having the court uphold the testimony of Burns and permit him to relate a conversation he claimed to have had in New York prior to the 1919 World's series with Cicotte, Chick Gandil and Abe Attell.

Burns furnished the biggest sensation of the trial by declaring that the ball players, and not the gamblers, had proposed the selling out of the series. He testified that Gandil had voluntarily made the offer to sell the series for $100,000.

Efforts of the defence to have this testimony stricken out and to shake the story told by Burns were futile.

During Burns' recital of the conference and subsequent conferences the names of Jean Dubuc, a former big league ball player, and Fred Toney, now a pitcher for the New York Giants, were mentioned by Burns as having been present at one of the conferences. Their connection with the case was not disclosed.

MRS. T. SUFFERN TAILER

New York and Newport society woman who will be hostess to President and Mrs. Harding at "Honeysuckle Lodge" the Taller residence at Newport. The date of the President's visit has not yet been announced.

By BETTY ALDEN

Today promises to be about the busiest day of the entire season at the North Shore. Society of all ages will flock to Pingree Field, Wenham, in the morning and afternoon for the bazaar and horse show at the Navy Festival. In the evening, many of the Summer colony "de luxe" will motor down to Manchester to Horticultural Hall for the cabaret and dancing, which forms part of the charity fete. Members of the younger set have been looking forward to the evening's event with eager anticipation, for the dancing will last until 4 o'clock. Among the list of ticketholders for the cabaret show I note the following names: Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr., R. S. Bradley, W. A. Parker, C. G. Rice, Bayard Tuckerman, E. Sohier Welch, Miss Frances Townsend, S. H. Wolcott, R. S. Russell, D. L. Pickman, H. J. Coolidge, William Endicott, J. B. Hoyt, H. P. McKean, T. B. Gannett, T. J. Lothrop, S. D. Warren, Jr., Mrs. W. Cheever, J. S. Parker, Louis Shaw, Mrs. G. W. Minot, DeFord Beal and H. P. King. To add to the importance of the affair, Mr. and Mrs. J. Harold Coolidge will have as their guests Admiral and Mrs. Gleaves, and also General and Mrs. Clarence Edwards.

The cabaret show tonight at Manchester will be a reminiscence of last Winter to the audience, for several of the best features of the Vincent Club and Hasty Pudding shows will be presented, and members of the younger set who took part in them last Winter will perform this evening, including Mary Hagourney, Elizabeth Cassell, Belinda Adamowsky from Mr. George Ware, Jr., and Mr. Foster Trainor. Many people remember the decided hit which the very attractive Elisabeth Caswell made in the Vincent Club show when she appeared as a beautiful orchid. Her costume was one of the most original of the entire show.

Society is very much interested in the engagement announcement of Miss Lois Arnold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund K. Arnold of No. 12 Gloucester street, to Stanwood Knowles Holton of No. 48 Allerton street, Brookline. Lois, who is a graduate of Miss May's school, is a 1920 "deb" and a member of the Junior League. As she is to enter Radcliffe in the Fall, no date has been set for the wedding. Mr. Holton was graduated from Harvard last June. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold and their family are now at their Summer home at Manchester on the North Shore.

Mrs. Borden Covel of Brookline has charge of the toy table at the Seaside Chapel outdoor sale which takes place this morning and evening at North Scituate. A concert will follow the sale which will attract many of the Summer residents along the South Shore. All sorts of articles, useful and otherwise, will be sold; besides this there will be a fortune-teller, and entertainments for children, of which Mrs. William C. Reynolds of Bay State and chairman of the Church Guild, has charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Sewall Pessenden of Chestnut Hill and Cottage Point, Manchester, are entertaining their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Busk of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Ayer and the Misses Ayer of Beverly and Mrs. Ayer of Juniper Ridge, Hamilton, are now at Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, for a golf tournament.

Herbert Bramwell Shaw of Boston is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parkman Shaw at "Redwood" in Lenox.

Among the members of the North Shore Summer colony who have entered their horses in today's horse show at Pingree Field are Mary Curtis, Alvin F. Sortwell, James Mandell, the Myopia Hunt Club, Paulina Fenno, Frederick Ayer, Ellen Tainter, Rosamond Bradley, Harold J. Coolidge, Nell W. Rice, Olivia Ames, Herbert Hughes and George S. Mandell.

Mrs. Stephen Van R. Crosby of No. 85 Beacon street is spending the Summer in Switzerland with her daughter Katherine and the latter's fiance, Robert Chouteau Harvard. It is hear that Mrs. Crosby's son, Henry G. who is studying at Harvard, will join them later on.

SWEARS HE GOT JURORS' NAMES FROM CUDDY

Dowe First Witness for Defence in Trial of Boxing Promoter

Salem, July 22.—The defence in the trial of John E. Cuddy, Jr., boxing promoter, and Robert M. Dowe, both of Lawrence, opened with contempt in attempting to tamper with jurors in the case of George E. Cuddy, charged with offering an illegal gratuity to a Watch and Ward Society agent, opened here today with Dowe on the stand.

Under direct examination by Attorney John Twomey of Lawrence, Dowe testified he had known John E. Cuddy, Jr., for five years and had been head usher at the latter's fight arena.

He told of having received from Cuddy a list of four jurors in the George E. Cuddy case. They were Hart, Tracey, Renfrew and Marble. When he said he knew none of them he was, he said, instructed to copy the list and give Samuel Jensky a copy. He said he did this.

Cuddy is expected to take the stand either late this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

The defense will attempt to confute the testimony given by Samuel Jensky, Fred L. Roberts and Frank McChesney, originally charged with complicity in the alleged jury fixing conspiracy, who have turned state's evidence.

General Smuts May Come to United States Soon

By International News Service.

London, July 22.—General Jan Christian Smuts, premier of South Africa, who played a dominant role in the Irish peace negotiations, promises to be equally prominent in the British counsels at the disarmament conference in Washington.

General Smuts today cancelled his return passage to South Africa on July 29 and is seriously considering a trip to the United States in a semi-official capacity.

OFFICER DENIES ASKING MONEY OF BERGDOLLS

Major Campbell Flatly Contradicts Statements of Slacker's Mother

By International News Service.

Washington July 22.—Sweeping denial of all charges that he had received any money from the Bergdoll family or sought any money while he was acting as counsel for Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, Philadelphia draft dodger, was made today by Major Bruce Campbell before the House committee investigating the escape of Bergdoll.

Campbell flatly denied the charge made by Mrs. Bergdoll, mother of the slacker, that he had sought $100,000 for "hush-ups" in Washington. He also made categorical denial of further statements by Mrs. Bergdoll, indicating that the officer had received $5,000 from Grover.

"There is not a word of truth in any of these statements," Campbell said.

He acknowledged evidence showing deposits to his bank account at about the time that Mrs. Bergdoll claims he was given the $5,000, but stated that he had not prepared a statement of his finances and was not ready to go into that in detail at this time.

SONS OF IRWIN MEET FOR THE FIRST TIME

Offspring of Dual Wives of Baseball Man Discuss Father's Tangled Life

Arthur H. Irwin of Boston and F. Harold Irwin of New York, both sons of the former famous ball player, Arthur Irwin, have just met in New York for the first time.

It was a dramatic meeting. Neither knew of the other's existence until the dual life of their father was bared by an investigation into his financial affairs following his disappearance from a Boston-bound steamer from New York.

Each thought the ball player a kind and loving father. Neither son had the slightest suspicion that his father maintained one family in Boston and one in New York. Then came the investigation and the realization that both sons—and both mothers—had been duped.

The blow has prostrated the New York wife, and left the Boston widow dazed. The Boston son bears it well. The New York son is broken in spirit. He broke down and bitterly reviled his father for his actions, and declared that the news "had almost killed" his mother.

It was learned today that while Irwin had denied his Boston son a college education on the plea of poverty he had given his New York son an excellent college training.

The Boston son stated when he left Boston for New York that he was going to fight to the end to get possession of any property or money that might be due his mother. What the two boys decided in regard to the financial situation they would not disclose.

For nearly thirty years, it has been learned, Irwin had been married to the New York wife. He married his Boston wife thirty-eight years ago. He met the second wife in Philadelphia, according to the New York son, and for years maintained her and the boy in a comfortable apartment in New York.

WASHBURN OUT FOR DEFEAT OF FULLER

Will Be Rival Candidate If Other Seeks Re-election; Report Cox Will Retire

Robert M. Washburn took off his hat up in York Cliffs, Me., this morning and threw it into the ring down here.

Mr. Washburn announces that if Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller is a candidate for renomination in 1922, and there is no strong candidate against him, Washburn will oppose him in the primaries. If Fuller is nominated, Washburn says he will run against him as an independent candidate.

"The great issue of 1922 is the internment of Mr. Fuller, to which I have consecrated myself," says Washburn.

Fuller may save Washburn the trouble of running against him for Lieutenant-Governor. It is generally assumed that Mr. Fuller will be a candidate for Governor, as Governor Cox has announced his decision to retire upon the expiration of his term next year.

Washburn made the run as an independent candidate last year after Fuller had beaten former Speaker Joseph E. Warner for the nomination. He got 132,000 votes. Full got 346,-000.

Rules of Song Title Test

The Boston American Song of the World Title Test is a test of skill and judgment in the selection of song titles and is open to residents of the United States and the Provinces of New England or Canada.

Two hundred and twenty cash awards will be given by this newspaper to its readers who submit the largest percentages of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published, one each day, beginning Thursday, August 4, in the Boston American.

All employees of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of 60 pictures, each representing the title of a well-known song to be guessed, one picture to be published each day, the last picture on Wednesday, June 8, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may hereafter be run by this paper will not debar anyone entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE list of titles. Only one award to a family will be allowed, but more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written, typewritten or printed plainly on the Boston American coupon page or some duplicate form so used, accompanied either by the picture published by the Boston American, or a box or pencil outline thereof, and must have the author's residence, etc., of the participant on the same.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, i. e. do not write title under one another or a piece of paper.

Where contestants are not complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the nearest correct solutions, prizes weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie awards will be made as follows: Duplicate prizes will be awarded to the tying contestants. Any one declined in favor of the next subsequent will receive similar award.

Under no circumstances should participants send song titles other than those called for by the pictures published by the Boston American, as none will be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and number them in all together as sent in.

Address all communications relative to making the awards, "The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand or better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American Title Headquarters, so as to make sure of their receipt, either by mail or by hand. No titles received after the last issue will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be neatly addressed as follows:

Boston American Song of the World Title Test,
Boston American Building,
Boston, Mass.

P. O. Box 359,

and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender plainly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

The Boston American Song of the World Title Test will contain sufficient correct titles. It will not be necessary that the packages be fully prepaid from the Postoffice as first-class matter, but the Boston American reserves the right to refuse to receive packages on which postage is insufficient for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to the Boston American Song of the World Title Test. Titles must be printed in ink or typewritten, and all unnecessary words omitted.

Participants who desire further information may call personally or inquire at the Song Title Editor, Boston American, Summer street, Boston 9, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies, they must enclose sufficient postage for same, and they may have those Mile Side or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in or addition to these conditions that it may deem necessary for fairly and properly conducting the Test, and the decision of the Boston American Song Title Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and agreement to abide by the same.

TRESPASSERS GIVE UP BERRIES TO AVOID ARREST

Salem, N. H., July 22.—The blueberrying fad of the Lawrence "social set" received a severe jolt when Charles C. Richardson, owner of a productive blueberry swamp, near Pelham, assisted by Deputy Sheriff Peabody and a few neighbors fell among a horde of pickers who had violated the trespassing laws and garnered ten quarts of their berries, offering them the alternative of answering a court summons. The members of the berry picking excursionists' automobiles were taken. The owner of the patch had taken this means of compelling pickers to obey the trespassing laws.

FAKIR'S 'LIST' MIGHT PROVE CONFUSING

Only Serious Aspect of Outsider's Scheme in American's $6,000 Song Test

A Boston participant in the $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test wants to know why the Test Editor has not said something about the Middlesex County fakir who offers "for the sum of $1 and two self-addressed envelopes" to "mail you a list of possible answers to the Boston American Songs of the World Test."

And the answer to bestow the Test Editor did not think it necessary.

The 21 persons in the Movie Play Title Test were persons of intelligence. So far as the Test Editor has been able to determine the Middlesex County seeker after "easy money" has confined his operations to letters in similar contests, whose names and addresses necessarily have been printed in these columns.

YOUR OWN POSSIBLE LIST.

Knowing these ladies and gentlemen to be at least of average intelligence, the Test Editor took it for granted that them would be able to arrive at such bait.

A list of POSSIBLE winners! Why, that is what you are getting together now. Your own is a list of "possible" winners.

At the bottom of his postal card the fakir writes in ink:

"Turn No. 22 upside down."

The Test Editor knows no reason why this little tip should be restricted to the mailing list of the operators referred to and—even though it reduces the Song Title Test to 59 pictures—hereby passes the information along to every other participant.

Apparently responses were so few that the fakirs made a second try at it, sending out a second postal card from Worcester County. In this one the price dropped to 75 cents.

WAY TO BECOME CONFUSED.

If anybody is silly enough to invest $1, or even 75 cents, in a list of "possible" answers, the Test Editor cannot prevent it. The surest way in the world to become so confused over titles, and finally lose through indecision, is to swap at somebody else's "possible" answers on the assumption that they are better than your own.

It must be obvious that if any clever gentleman is certain of his list of titles he is NOT offering them for sale at one dollar a throw. If he can produce the largest number of CORRECT titles, the Boston American will pay him $1,000. If he fails to produce the largest number, there is a second award of the same amount.

Up to the present moment, certainly, no participant in the Test has been in need of assistance. The Test Editor's worry continues to be over the apparently failing powers of Mr. Artist. If that young man has a "stroke" left in his system he should produce it without delay. Only twenty-one days to go!

Tomorrow: Test Picture No. 39.

MILLBURY MAN IS FLEECED OUT OF $350

Providence, July 22.—Joseph Poirier of Millbury, Mass., was fleeced out of $350 in the time worn pocket matching game. While sitting in the Union station he was approached by a man who said his name was Edward McCall. The two took a walk up Smith hill and met a third man, a friend of McCall. The friend matched pennies for a while and then Pelletier joined them. Pelletier was accused of cheating and threatened with arrest. Pelletier became frightened and "to show he was honest" he handed one of the men $350. That was the last he saw of it.

LOBSTER WAR BENEFITS NEWPORT COTTAGERS

Newport, R. I., July 22.—Members of the cottage colony are getting the benefit of a lobster war between the fishermen and the retailers who want to buy at wholesale prices and sell at large profits, using the fishermen's less than they are willing to accept.

The lobstermen decided to set up a business of their own right on the wharf. Yesterday motor cars park in large numbers every afternoon and the wives purchase lobsters for their households at a comparatively low price.

SODA STILL TOO HIGH, REPORT INSPECTORS

Thompson's Spa Refuses Data, Saying Prices Are Nobody's Business

The majority of Boston dispensers of ice cream and sodas are still obtaining excessive prices, according to reports made to Eugene C. Hultman, chairman of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life.

Inspectors of the Boston Department of Health, under the direction of Dr. P. H. Mulloney, deputy health commissioner, visited fifty stores, collecting data requested by Chairman Hultman.

In only one instance was this information refused, the proprietors of Thompson's Spa in Newspaper row declaring that it was no one's business if they charged a dollar a drink.

It was found in the investigation that prices for ice cream cones range from 3 cents, in two cases, to 11 cents; ice cream sodas are selling at 10 cents to 22 cents, while forty out of fifty firms charge 15 cents or more for such a drink. Milk shakes range in price from 10 to 12 cents each, with eleven out of the fifty charging 15 cents or more.

These prices compare unfavorably with those at Bronx, New York, fountains, where 11 cents is being charged for a dish of ice cream and 15 cents, war-tax included, for ice-cream sodas. Wartime prices still prevail there, however, for service at tables.

Saugus Firemen Find 40-Gallon Still in Blazing House

Firemen fighting a blaze in the home of James Gould at No. 198 Walnut street, North Saugus, today, discovered a forty-gallon copper still in full operation and seventeen fifty-gallon barrels of mash ready for use.

Gould is a milkman, and was preparing to start out on his route when the fire was discovered. He says that he does not know who turned in the alarm and declares that he did not.

The flames and water did approximately $1,000 damage to the house.

The firemen believe that the blaze started from the gas flame under the still.

FIND BODY OF UNKNOWN; MAN FLOATING IN WATER

The body of an unidentified man was found floating in the water under the wharf of the Edison Electric Company's storage garage at Liverpool wharf on Atlantic avenue today by John Dooley of No. 23 Alaska street, Roxbury. An employe of the Edison company said the body was that of a man named Hayes from South Boston. The description given out by the police states that the man was fifty-two years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, sandy complexioned, bald on top, smooth faced and dressed in a dark blue serge coat and vest, dark cotton trousers, blue cotton shirt, with collar attached, gray cotton undershirt, black wool hat, no shoelaces and gray soft hat. The body had been in the water a few hours. Two empty bottles said to have contained wood alcohol were found on the wharf.

SEA EAGLE GOES TO AID OF ADMIRAL FARRAGUT

San Francisco, July 22.—The coastwise steamer Admiral Farragut, which was disabled late last night in a dense fog twelve miles off the San Francisco lightship, when her main steam feed pipe burst, scalding a score of her crew, was reported today in tow by the tug Sea Eagle, dispatched to her assistance.

23 BURNED TO DEATH WITH SCHOONER

Some Were Chinese Being Smuggled Into America, Says Survivor

Pensacola, Fla., July 22.—The schooner Viola was burned and twenty-three men, including some Chinese, who were being smuggled into this country, lost their lives, according to a story told here today by Alfred Ullman, a seaman.

Ullman was found six miles south of Chipley and placed under arrest. He said a boat was to have met the Viola twenty miles from Pensacola, but that it did not arrive.

The crew and the Chinamen then became restless, he said, and trouble broke out, culminating when the vessel caught fire and burned to the water's edge. Ullman was a member of the Viola's crew, he said.

CRANE WILBUR GETS DIVORCE IN PROVIDENCE

Gross Misbehavior Charged Against Wife by Well Known Film Star

Providence, R. I., July 22.—Crane Wilbur, nationally known film star, obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from Florence D. Wilbur in the Providence County Superior Court July 8, it has become known.

Gross misbehavior was charged and the case was not contested by Mrs. Wilbur, also a moving picture actress, now said to be living in Long Beach, Cal.

Because the decree was obtained under the name of Erwin Crane Wilbur the identity of the plaintiff was not recognized at the time it was granted.

Wilbur gave his address as 115 Beaufort street, this city, and said he had been a resident of the State for two years prior to the divorce action.

SHE DARES! Florence Barrett, champion woman water bicycle rider, who won the Battery (N. Y.), Staten Island race, comes right out and challenges the world to wrest her title from her. The tremendous power of her legs was obtained by swimming and constant exercising. (Central.)

LIGHTNIN'! Mlle. Suzanne Langlen, women's world tennis champion, who sails tomorrow for America, will play her first game in this country at the Field Club of Greenwich, Greenwich, Ct. So many demands have been made for her services that many clubs have been refused.

FLEETING KISSES! The romantic looking chap in the centre, a poet, is either a hero or a fool. He has just wagered that he can kiss 1,000 girls while on a hike from New York to Chicago. Hugh and Malcolm Hardyman, left and right, will serve as referees. Let's see, how many jails are there from N. Y. to Chi. (Central.)

COMFORT FIRST! Odd garments have been devised to provide the utmost in comfort during the hot Summer months, but it remained with Mrs. Hazel Bowers of New York to hit upon the coolest garb in which to do her housework—the one-piece bathing suit. She finds that it is not only cool, but permits the body full freedom to accomplish the numerous household tasks. She says this costume is sensible and comfortable. (Central.)

JUNK OR WORLD'S FINEST? That is the problem facing the new Shipping Board officials who inspected the big ocean liner Leviathan. It has been unofficially stated that the craft may be rebuilt at a cost of $12,000,000, which would make it the largest and most gorgeously appointed ship afloat. However, she is now rotting on the mud flats of Hoboken, N. J., a gigantic rebuke to governmental inertia and neglect. (I. & H.)

PAGEANT MUCH IMPROVED ON SECOND NIGHT

Cold Wind Causes Patrons to Muffle in Wraps, but Enthusiasm Is Hearty

Plymouth, July 22.—Muffled to the neck in steamer rugs and blankets to protect themselves from a northeast wind which swept the grandstands, the second night's audience at the Pilgrim Tercentenary Pageant of "The Pilgrim Spirit," sat for two hours and a half through the most unseasonable weather, yet surpassing in applause the appreciation shown at the premiere, Wednesday evening. . . .

The storm reported north of here showed its effects in sending slightly more than half a house to the second performance.

At the opening of the performance Professor Baker expressed confidence that, with the improved state of the grounds, the large cast would surpass even the first night's efforts. This was borne out by the splendid way in which the various scenes were enacted.

Last night's performance differed in certain important respects from that of the opening night. One or two of the musical numbers heard on Wednesday were omitted last night. Chalmers Clifton, musical director, explained that this was due to the desire of those in authority to bring the performance within the limit of two hours and a quarter. It is expected that a certain variety will be added to subsequent performances by varying the musical numbers.

A welcome addition to the performance, as given on Wednesday night, was the enactment of the landing of the Pilgrims from the Mayflower in the fourth episode. The sight of the heroic band of men and woman, the men with their arquebuses held at the ready, as they came over the incline from the shore, the spotlight playing upon them, made a picture never to be forgotten. The audience rose to the significance of the scene immediately and it received a round of applause which rivaled even that accorded the beautiful dance in the Dutch scene.

The Dutch dance was a more finished and beautiful spectacle than on the opening night. Hundreds of dancers weaving in and out in a complicated web of the dance, forming themselves in one gracious group after another, the whole scene illuminated by flambeaux held high above the heads of the dancers, while the spotlight from the tower threw only a soft radiance over the scene, was in very truth, the poetry of motion.

HEADLIGHT TEST STATIONS TO BE ESTABLISHED

Autoists May Have Lamps Properly Focused in Time for New Law

Testing stations will be established throughout the State for the proper focusing of automobile headlamps under the new headlight law which becomes effective next month. "Doubtlessly there are many persons who have neither the ability nor inclination to attempt to make the proper focal adjustment," said State Registrar Frank A. Goodwin. "It is the intention of the department to approve testing stations in the various sections of the State where owners may go and have the headlights adjusted."

Registrar Goodwin again announces that the use of any but the approved lenses after August 15 is punishable by a fine. He says that any person with a plant well-equipped for testing should communicate at once with Alfred Devine of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, State House.

Mr. Goodwin today revoked and suspended the licenses of the following drivers for alleged violation of the auto laws or regulations:

ELKS' MEMORIAL RITUAL FOR COURT OFFICER

The funeral of Charles E. Byrnes, for the last eight years a Superior Court officer in Middlesex County, who died Wednesday, after a long illness, will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in St. Catherine's Church, Spring Hill, Somerville. A solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated. Officers of the Somerville Lodge of Elks will conduct their memorial ritual at the Byrnes home on Lexington avenue, West Somerville, this evening. The burial will be in St. Paul's Cemetery, Arlington.

UNITARIAN LAYMEN TO MEET AT STAR ISLAND

More than 115 delegates, representing twenty States, the District of Columbia, and Canada, will attend the Institute for Religious Education at Star Island, Isles of Shoals, under the auspices of the Unitarian Laymen's League Saturday. The league has invited each of its 241 members to send two delegates and eighty-five chapters have responded. Arthur L. Palmer, assistant secretary of the league, will be in charge of the party during the institute, which will end August 6.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

GUILFORD SCORES A 78 IN THIRD ROUND; HAGEN IN BRILLIANT SPURT.

By ROBERT HARLOW.

Country Club, Md., July 22.—Jesse Guilford, the Massachusetts amateur champion took 78 for his third round in the National Open Golf Championship, giving him a total of 232 for the three rounds he has completed.

	His card:
Out	6	5	4	5	5	3	4	4—41
In	4	5	5	3	4	4	3	5—37—78

Jesse dropped five shots to par on the first four holes. He drove into the ditch off the first tee and needed three to get on the green. He found a trap off the second tee, was just free of it in two, short in three, over in four, on in five and down in one putt for a six.

* * *

At the third he drove under a tree, the ball hooking at the end of its flight. This caused him to take three to get on and two putts. He failed to drive on the fourth green and after chipping one took two putts for a four.

After this bad start he played better, being out in 41. He was only two worse than par for the in nine, dropping shots at the 11th and 18th, where he took three putts.

Guilford can hardly hope to finish in the money. His 78 this morning is likely to leave him in no better than 25th place starting the final round.

* * *

Walter Hagen pulled himself into a position with the championship when he shot a brilliant 34 for the first nine holes of his third round this morning.

His card:

Out 4 4 3 5 4 3 3 5—34

Hutchison Lauds Work of His Golfing Rival

By JOCK HUTCHISON

Columbia Country Club, Md., July 22.—Surprises came thick and fast in the play in the open championship now in progress at the Columbia Country Club. I do not like to start this article by offering an alibi for my own poor showing, but I feel the golfing public is entitled to the facts in the case.

After a fairly satisfactory round in the morning I managed to squeeze out a 75 after a poor outward journey. In the afternoon the first nine holes played me false again and with a miserable 43 I added a 10, which puts me out of the running unless I can perform miracles in the last two rounds. The American open title, elusive will of the wisp, will have evaded me again.

* * *

It is a hard matter to keep one's golf going at top speed through a season's play. Nothing seemed to break right for me today, but this was due to my own bad playing. My shots would not come off right no matter how I tried. When one is playing badly the breaks seem to go against him. I can't complain of hard luck because I probably got what was coming to me.

* * *

There are more pleasant things to talk about, however, and the most important of these is a sensational scoring of long Jim Barnes, who made the trip with us to Scotland. Jim got a record round of 69 in the morning by playing some very good golf. Jim slipped occasionally, but his wonderful spurt at the turn where he put together four threes in succession was a comeback that made up for his few mistakes.

* * *

He was 75 in the last round and leads the field with four strokes, which seems safe enough if Jim can continue at his present gait. His nearest rivals are Charles Murray of Montreal, a very fine golfer, and Freddy McLeod of the local club. Freddy is playing bonnie golf. Maybe the jinx that has been following the home player to open championships for years will be put to rout. No home pro seems to be able to win a big event on his home course. Freddy knows every kind of the Columbia links and any profit by his knowledge.

* * *

Bobby Jones caused a big sensation when he got over the first nine holes in 32 strokes. This is nearly a record for this nine. Bobby had an excellent chance to beat Barnes' morning record as he stepped back to the first tee, but began to lose confidence on the green. On the last six holes Bobby sliced and shot at the fourteenth, they tell me, and this was the beginning of his troubles. He took one more putt than was needed at the sixteenth and seventeenth, otherwise he would have made a 69 and tied Jim. Bobby is still to be considered as he is only five strokes behind the leaders. I watched him play a few shots and those I saw showed fearless carefree style which always indicated confidence.

* * *

The gallery was greatly surprised when the report spread around that Abe Mitchell had withdrawn from the tournament. Abe quit on the ninth hole in the afternoon after playing badly. He had a putt left for a 41 going out and as Abe said on the morning he figured the task as hopeless.

* * *

Abe said that he was tired and weary. He made no other complaints that I heard of. This leaves the burden of the foreign invasion all on the shoulders of George Duncan. He is six strokes behind Barnes. Duncan got a fine start with a 72 and looked dangerous. Later he had one bad hole, which ran his score up to 78 leaving him tied with Alex Smith, the surprise of the championship. Alex has been playing remarkable golf around the Shenecossett links this Summer and came here to continue his work. He had two 74's today without any breaks in the luck.

* * *

Duncan appeared to be playing his shots well enough but the penalty for being off the line is severe with the extra stroke added for being out of bounds. There is no complaint to make about the course as Jim Barnes and Bobby Jones showed us that low scoring was a possibility if one played the proper kind of golf.

* * *

I may be down and out, but it is shocking to see the number of good players hurled with me in the graveyard. I would hardly have believed it possible if one had told me last night that players mentioned as favorites and likely winners would have collapsed on the first day.

On the tombstones I read the names of Lew Dingal, who took eighteen on one hole today; Mike Brady, who got a 3on seventy yesterday, Peter O'Hern, another sensation in the qualifying round; Jack Burke, who finished second last year; Joe Kirkwood, the Australian champion, and Tommy Kerrigan, whom I thought was going to beat me in the British championship. The last-named pair appears to be just about half buried, and if the opportunity offers itself I think you will see some pretty lively corpses floating around.

* * *

Walter Hagen had a hard row to hoe on the first round when he took 76. He made a great fight for a good round in the second and had he taken only two putts on the last green he would have made a 72. Hagen was not putting in his customary style. Walter is a good finisher and has won championships before by coming up from behind.

Hagen has a big contract before him this time as he is eight strokes in the rear of Barnes. But this championship is only half over and a brilliant form, but began to lose confidence on the green. On the last six holes Bobby sliced and shot at the fourteenth, they tell me, and this was the beginning of his troubles. He took one more putt than was needed at the sixteenth and seventeenth, otherwise he would have made a 69 and tied Jim. Bobby is still to be considered as he is only five strokes behind the leaders. I watched him play a few shots and those I saw showed fearless carefree style which always indicated confidence.

IRWIN'S DIAMOND CAREER HAD NO FLAW

By SAM CRANE

No people were more surprised over the astounding disclosure of Arthur Irwin's complicated life than his baseball associates and friends. It was unlike him and his apparent nature. The exposed secrets of his life are almost unbelievable to those of his friends who knew him intimately. The writer knew Irwin as a baseball player, manager, promoter and scout for over forty years. His career in baseball had no flaw. He was a true lover of the sport and did his full share to uplift it and to secure its permanency as America's own.

Arthur Irwin was an authority on baseball. His fund of anecdotes of famous players and noted contests that have made baseball history, interesting incidents and performances of players was inexhaustible.

His memory was remarkable and he was always assured of an interested audience whenever he joined a fanning bee.

Any newspapermen was sure of a story if he asked for one from Irwin. He was one of the old school of players. Still he was fully aware that the game had progressed and that there were better fielders today than in early days of the game.

He always claimed, though, that there were more natural hitters in the old days than now.

INVENTOR OF GLOVE.

It was Irwin who first gave the initial impetus to the superior fielding of the present day by introducing the fielding glove.

He was the inventor of the glove that is used today, and also the "wing" between the thumb and forefinger.

"Irwin's glove" caused a transformation in fielding, and besides assisting in making the game faster, it prevented injuries to players' hands that kept many stars in the business longer than they otherwise would have been.

Irwin was a superior judge of a young player's natural ability, and also a developer of youthful talent. He had years of experience in all departments of the game and he was good in all.

As a business manager he also excelled. He earned much money for Charley Chubb of the Rochester club and the Toronto club when in charge of the business of those organizations.

When acting as scout for the Yankees at the time Frank Farrell was their owner, Arthur earned $50,000 in one year for Farrell's club by the purchase and sale of players.

Irwin was also manager of the Giants when the late Andrew Freedman was president of the New York National League club.

Irwin's business ability had little opportunity to shine, though, at that time. Mr. Freedman just then was shy on spending money for players.

No stars appealed to him. Consequently Irwin lost the chance of securing for the Giants the great Larry Lajoie, whom he could have bought from the Fall River club at the time for $500.

This was the "enormous" price the Philadelphia Nationals paid for Larry, who was the "Babe Ruth" of his day and time.

It was Irwin who got Russell Ford for the Yankees and also Jack Quinn. I think he probably discovered more players who developed into luminaries of the sport than any one man.

Earl Smith, catcher of the Giants, is one of the latest stars Irwin brought out. Catcher O'Neill of the Braves is another. Irwin, too, had much to do with the development of Pop Young and George Kelly, both of whom were sent to the Rochester club to have their rough edges rubbed off.

There are, in fact, hundreds of big league players who owe to Irwin their present positions in the majors.

It was in 1879 that Irwin got his first job as a professional player. He was engaged for the Worcester club (then in a minor league) by its manager, Frank Bancroft. Lee Richmond, the phenomenal southpaw pitcher from Brown University was on the same team. Arthur was a thin, skinny lowheaded youngster and played shortstop.

Irwin was a left-handed batter, but threw right-handed. He was never a hard hitter, but could "place" the ball.

Irwin was a heady player, or, He was up to all the "inside" work known in the old days and maintained many new ones himself.

When in 1883 Frank Bancroft took the management of the Providence Grays, a team that acquired Jame later on and had such noted players as Joe Start, Charlie Radbourne, John Ward, Jack Farrell, Jerry Denny and others, Irwin was taken along as shortstop, and he fitted in so nicely with those stars that he remained with them until the club disbanded.

He took up the management of other clubs soon after, and had charge of the Phillies, Washingtons, Boston Players' League club and Boston Americans before going to New York.

He was also a trainer for the University of Pennsylvania at one time. He was successful in all his baseball undertakings.

AL JOLSON OFFERS $75,000 FOR MORVICH

New York, July 22.—During the course of the racing at Empire City Al Jolson, the comedian, made an offer to Fred Burlew of $75,000 for the sensational two-year-old colt Morvich. The offer was refused.

Jolson announced that he was prepared to draw a check for the full amount and close the deal at once. Burlew told him that the colt was not for sale.

Morvich has now won six races and is undefeated. He has few stake engagements, but one of the few is the Hopeful at Saratoga, which probably will be worth more than $30,000 to the winner this year. Several other offers for Morvich have also been refused recently.

LANARKS TIED IN FALL RIVER CONTEST

Massachusetts Team Only One Not Defeated by Great Scotch Combination

Fall River, July 22.—The third Lanark soccer team of Glasgow, Scot., ended its tour of the United States and Canada in a tie game with a picked eleven of this city.

The score was 2 to 2. The visitors had won twenty-four consecutive games. They will leave New York Saturday on the return trip to Scotland.

GRANDSTAND PLAYERS TO RECEIVE FREE PASSES

Philadelphia, July 22.—In an effort to break up the habit of fans who keep baseballs knocked into the stands, the Philadelphia National League Club today announced it would issue a pass good for one day to spectators throwing the ball back to the playing field.

Local fans have recently been tormenting the guards by throwing the baseballs around the pavilions before giving them up, and many were never recovered.

CANADIANS PICK DAVIS CUP TEAM

Toronto, July 22.—The Canadian Tennis Association tonight announced its selections for the team which will meet the Australians in the Davis cup preliminary to be played here commencing Saturday. The players are Paul Bennet and G. W. Holmes of Winnipeg, L. H. Laframbois of Montreal and A. Milne of Vancouver.

CAMP DEVENS NINE IN CONCORD GAME

The Concord nine will play with Camp Devens on the Concord Centre playground tonight.

CHARLEY WHITE WILL MEET DUNDEE

Lightweight Title Aspirants Booked to Battle On August 10

New York, July 22.—Charley White, Chicago lightweight, was yesterday matched to meet Johnny Dundee in a ten-round decision bout at the Boxing Commission on the night of August 10. This will be White's first appearance in New York in nearly seven years.

The Chicago boxer's last important bout was against Benny Leonard last year at Benton Harbor, Mich., it was in this bout that White knocked Leonard through the ropes. It was the closest call that the champion had ever had since winning the title.

Since then White has been clamoring for a return engagement and in Dundee he may find a stepping stone to another bout with the titleholder. White has agreed to make 135 pounds at 12 o'clock on the afternoon of the day of the Dundee bout.

$40,000 OFFERED FOR GREB-GIBBONS BOUT

New York, July 22.—Lew Raymond, manager and matchmaker of the Boxing Drome A. A., yesterday wired an order to Tom Gibbons and Harry Greb a $40,000 purse for a fifteen-round bout for the American light heavyweight championship. The club also would present the winner a diamond belt.

As a binder of good faith, the Boxing Drome A. A. announces it is ready to deposit $25,000 in any bank in Boxers name as soon as articles are signed. The other $25,000 would be deposited twenty-four hours before the men enter the ring. George Engle, manager for Greb, has already agreed to the offer.

BRITONS' NEED SIX FIRST PLACES TO WIN MEET

By CHARLES E. PARKER

It is not unlikely that second places will determine the winning or losing of tomorrow's great international intercollegiate track and field meet between the combined team of Oxford and Cambridge and the combined team of Harvard and Yale.

* * *

Ten events are on the list for competition, and although Captain H. G. D. Rudd of the British army has been quoted as being reasonably sure of capturing only two of the ten first places, the estimate of the majority of close followers of track sports grants each team first places in four events, with the remaining two first places a matter that only can be settled when the men clash on the cinder path.

* * *

Should each team win one of the latter pair, which is not a remote possibility, each will have five first places to its credit, and automatically the deciding of the meet will fall upon the second places scored by the respective combinations.

* * *

The Oxford-Cambridge combination appears to have the sure winner of the 440-yard run, the one-mile run, the two-mile run and the hammer-throw, while the Crimson-Blue team seems booked to take the hurdles, the high jump, the broad jump and the shot put. This leaves the century dash and the half mile run, as the events on which the scoring of the meet will hinge.

* * *

In both the doubtful events the visitors seem to enjoy a slight edge. In the century Abrahams and Rudd are the British entrants, while Gourdin and Feldman will be the Yankee performers. The battle for first place should be confined to the first named on each team, and the record of Abrahams as a sprinter, both as to victories in this event as well as in consistent performances as to time, slightly outranks that of Harvard's great negro athlete.

* * *

The leading rivals in the half-mile run are Captain Rudd of Oxford and Tommy Campbell of Yale, and already the Britisher boasts a win over Tommy at a similar distance—the 800-meter run at the Antwerp Olympic games.

* * *

In both cases, however, the American representatives hold fighting chances of winning, and "fight" is said to have become the "middle name" of the Yankee participants.

* * *

Should the Harvard-Yale combination take one of the two doubtful events, victory would be won by them, for in probable second place winners the locals seem to considerably outclass the visiting team.

* * *

If Gourdin does not win the century he undoubtedly will land second place, while should Campbell fail to nose out his half-mile opponent, he should closely trail him over the finish line. The victory of either one would tie the number of first places scored by each team, and in the Harvard-Yale five would probably be added second places in the 440-yard dash, one-mile run, hurdles, high jump, shot put, hammer throw and either the century or 880, which would give the locals five firsts and seven seconds to the five firsts and three seconds of the Britishers.

* * *

Both teams staged final workouts Thursday afternoon. They did no hard work, however, the Englishmen and the trainers of the American athletes having decided that their teams are ready and need only tit lightest work before the meet.

For the runners the drill comprised jogging, merely, while the field event contestants did just enough work to prevent their muscles from becoming stiff.

TENNEY SAYS THE BRAVES LOOK LIKE WINNERS

By NICK FLATLEY

A day of rest having cooled their fevered brows, our Braves stepped out this p. m. to even matters up with the leading Pirates, who shattered a flock of local hopes by trotting off with the initial game of this thrilling and highly important series.

A double-header is on today as well as tomorrow.

As generally happens, the well-known sun popped out and shone nobly a few seconds after yesterday's joust had been declared null and void. But the early morning showers made the playing surface too skiddy for comfort or good baseball.

* * *

Even the miracle teams have to expect a defeat now and then and no outfit can be a bit off and expect to take the Pirates into camp. The Gibson club is in real championship mood, so accustomed to the lead that it's going to be one tough job to hand them back.

* * *

Advance sales for the morrow have shattered Brave traditions and a victory this afternoon would set the stage for one of Boston's greatest crowds at that dual till.

* * *

One of the strongest boosters for the present Braves is Frederick Tenney, who was quite a first baseman in the old days. He played on a flock of championship clubs, and knows a winner when he sees one. Take it from Fred, the Braves have hit a pace that makes them very strong pennant contenders.

* * *

Fred is asking the universal question, "What do you think of the Braves?" and then proceeding to answer it himself. Says he:

"Mitchell has got the boys feeling that they cannot be beaten. When a team feels that way it's a pretty tought proposition. Personally, I look for the Braves to come through as flag winners.

"They are not going to have an easy time by any means, as both the Pirates and Giants have plenty of class, and both are good scrapping aggregations. But what the Braves have shown since they started on their last trip through the West has convinced me, as it has almost everybody else in this neck of the woods, that they are going to fight it out for title honors with the American League wihners.

"And don't be a bit surprised if they go through the world series on very much the same fashion that the 1914 team did. They have the punch and will not be denied."

* * *

The showers didn't interfere with the league standing as the Giants also had a day of rest.

* * *

According to the Pittsburgh scribes, there's nothing the matter with baseball attendance wherever the Rabbit and company appear. The club this season has drawn exactly twice as many fans as last year's records show, and is getting stronger all the time as an attraction. The visitors can't heap too much praise on the Rabbit, whose playing and spirit, they claim, has undoubtedly kept the club at the top of the scramble.

The midget has had many wonderful seasons, but this one is by far his greatest. His fielding has always been superb, and now he has climbed up with the hitters, and is leading off as many runs as anybody on the club. More power to him, if he'll desist knocking 'em off for the next couple of days.

YANKEE SOLDIERS WIN SHOOT FROM BELGIANS

Coblenz, July 22.—The team representing the American forces in German territory won the interallied small arms competition at Aix la Chapelle.

The Americans defeated the Belgians, the second team in the contest, by 1,000 points.

COAST CHAMP SEEKS BOUT WITH WILSON

New York, July 22.—Bert Colima, middleweight champion of the Pacific Coast, is dickering for a match with Champion Johnny Wilson. It was said last night that the champion has expressed his willingness to meet the coast boxer if he disposes of Jim Delaney of Bridgeport, Ct., in their ten-round bout at Ebbets Field next Monday night.

RED SOX BEATEN BY BROWNS AGAIN

This Time Elmer Myers Gets His; Thormahlen Also Pounded for Four Runs

St. Louis, Mo., July 22.—The slump for the Eastern clubs in the West is not confined to Hugh Duffy's Red Sox, who unexpectedly have skidded out of the first division and now have only the White Sox and Athletics between them and the cellar. Barring the New York Yankees the East is having a disastrous journey through the West and Duffy will welcome the return home, which is scheduled for next Tuesday at Fenway Park, with the West starting its second invasion of the Atlantic coast region.

* * *

Up to the arriving in St. Louis, Hugh Duffy had an idea that his pitching staff ranked with anything in the major league circuit and surpassed the majority. What Duffy and Burke would like to possess is a clean-up hitter to lend support to Derrill Pratt. However, in losing two games here such hill artists as Pennock, Russell, Myers and Thormahlen have been bombarded.

* * *

Pennock entered a victory against the champions recently and in the opening game of the series was unable to hold a 7-0 lead. Then there was Elmer Myers, who dropped a 1-0 struggle with the White Sox a few days ago bowing to the attack of the Browns in less than three innings with four runs and seven hits.

* * *

It requires a flock of Babe Ruths on the offence to pass such a handicap, therefore Hugh Duffy can do is to grin and bear it. Even Miracle Man Stuff on the managerial seat is not capable of stopping in and preventing the enemy from slashing the pitching.

OLD-TIMERS TO PLAY AT M STREET TONIGHT

The old-time ball players of the M street playground, South Boston, will battle the McNary Park veterans on the grounds of the former tonight. Later there will be a team picked from these two to play either Kelly's All-Stars or the Pere Marquette team for the benefit of the Columbus Day Nursery.

MEDBURY

Says That if Boxing Is Carried Into the Home Every Minister Will Be a Fight Promoter

A prominent physician says that boxing is the best thing in the world to make a person healthy. He says that every man should have a pair of boxing gloves and a sparring partner. If you can't afford to hire a sparring partner go out and marry one.

If boxing is carried into the home they'll have to change the name of bungalows to arenas.

This will make every minister a fight promoter.

It would be a good idea to put the gloves on with the wife and find out who's the champion in the domicile.

Every time you have an argument, instead of inviting her into the parlor, ask her to step into the ring and then have some neighbor come in and referee.

After the neighbor counts you out she can go home and put her husband to sleep.

Can you imagine your wife waiting for you at night and meeting you at the front door with a leather rolling pin in each hand?

She may be the champion, but you'd get the bale.

Only you'd get it in the jaw instead of around the waist.

If the women would take up boxing there would be few divorces. The men wouldn't be able to apply for one.

Most of the scraps you have now you fight for nothing. Put the gloves on and charge the neighbors fifty cents to come in and watch it.

Give the tax to the husband; he'll probably need it more than the government.

The women could make extra money selling the picture rights. She might hit him so hard, though, that there wouldn't be enough left of him to photograph.

The marriage rites would have to be changed to "Love, honor and 50 per cent. of the gate receipts."

Still, some women have been married so often and they're wearing so many wedding rings that her husband would swear that she hit him with brass knuckles.

Marriage licenses could be done away with and the city clerk would issue fight permits instead.

You could have your family in one corner of the ring and her family in the other.

But both of you would probably have your hands full keeping them from fighting.

The husbands are away from home enough as it is, and if the women start arming themselves with boxing gloves the men will be afraid to come home at all.

The men will no longer have to go home with a black eye. They'll get it at home.

TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP PLANS COMPLETED

New York, July 22.—Plans for the fortieth tennis singles championship of the United States have been completed and official announcement sent to members by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Bill Tilden, spectacular international singles champion, Davis Cup star and holder of the National title, will defend his crown, and the field of entries, with many of the world's best players here for the Davis Cup matches, should be the classiest in the history of the event.

For the first time in its history the national singles will be held at the Germantown Cricket Club, in Philadelphia, and therefore several changes from the arrangement in former years have been made.

The sale of tickets is being handled by Samuel M. Peacock, No. 141 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. Many Philadelphia clubs have already underwritten large blocks of tickets, so that a good attendance is assured. The price for the season tickets, good for the whole tournament, is $5.25, including war tax.

Single day tickets will be sold only at the grounds on day of play. These cost $1.50 up to and including the semi-finals on Friday, September 16, then $2.50, tax included.

An innovation this year is the arrangement of boxes along in front of the grandstand. Each box, containing six chairs, costs $110 for the tournament, tax included.

The junior and boys' events customarily have been held during the men's singles championships to give the youngsters from all parts of the country a chance to see the best players in action. Holding the championship in September, however, made this arrangement impractical, as many of the boys would be returning to school or college.

Consequently these events have been transferred to the Longwood Cricket Club, in Boston, where they will take place the week of August 22. The father-and-son championship will be determined in Boston for the same reason.

CORNELL'S BEST MEN TO MEET INVADERS

Trials Held to Select Stars for Meet Against the English Athletes

Ithaca, N. Y., July 22.—Nine of the ten Cornell athletes who will in conjunction with Princeton's stars, uphold America's track traditions against the Oxford and Cambridge athletes at Travers Island next week were selected today by Coach Jack Moakley immediately after the conclusion of a formal trial meet on Schoellkopf Field.

They were: 120-yard hurdles (high), A. B. Treman; 440-yard dash, C. P. John; 880-yard dash, C. C. Carter; mile run, C. G. Irish; three-mile run, R. E. Brown; high jump, J. P. Stack; broad jump, P. D. Nichols; shotput, E. R. Goodnow; hammer throw, Wagar.

The entry in the hundred-yard dash will be chosen Monday after a trial between Lovejoy and Waterman scheduled to be run at Princeton.

Captain T. C. McDermott of this year's team and Captain D. B. Strickler of next year's team, both of whom were beaten in today's trials, will accompany the squad as substitutes.

FIGHTING BROWNS HOLD THEIR END UP

By JACK CONWAY

Ol' Jawn Brown would be very proud of the fighting qualities of his namesakes if he were to permit his hectic spirit to return to this world of orators and bootleggers. Classed with the leaders of the noble game of swat are three young men who are capable of carrying the name of Brown to many victories.

We have Harry (Kid) Brown of Philadelphia, Frankie Brown of New York and George Brown who also hails from Big Broadway. Then one might include K. O. Brown and "One Round" Brown and a lot of other guys by the name of Brown if he cared to delve into the ranks of the also rans and such places.

* * *

This story was inspired by the fact that George Brown is billed to pay our fair city a visit. He is to meet Young Gradwell of Newark in a ten-round bout at the Shevlin-Latzo show at the Boston Arena next Monday night.

Like Ol' Jawn and the rest of the Browns, New York George is a regular two-handed fighting person. He has been battling up around the pugilistic peaks for several years and has clashed with most of those warriors who are given honorable mention in the "Who's Who" of the boxing game.

* * *

Being a Brown in good standing, the New York boy did not select a setup for an opponent. Gradwell looked Charley Parker of the South End in the semi-final to the Wilson-Robinson tussle. The Newark youth gave the dope a rather severe jolt when he put the well-known skids under the native son. He says he will trounce Brown next Monday night, in which event he will be ready to take on School street Willie Jackson. A rather ambitious youth is this Gradwell.

* * *

While Brown and Gradwell are planning to display some of the Braves' battling qualities, Eddie Shevlin and Steve Latzo are busy getting fit for their encounter. This looms forth as a regular major league attraction, as the youthful experts would say.

Shevlin is considered by many as New England's best welterweight, in fact, it is a question whether the Briton of today could win over the Roxbury entry. As Shevlin has not lost a bout for two years, he has not any intention of permitting Latzo to hand him a setback. In his Boston debut the Wilkesbarre fighter won over Nate Siegal, who was then the New England welterweight champion.

* * *

Latzo believes he will conquer Shevlin just as easily as he disposed of Siegal. The invader has reason for his confidence as he is credited with having outpointed Jack Britton in a no-decision frolic.

Reservations for Monday's quarrel may be secured at the Arena A. C.'s downtown office, Room 15, No. 24 School street.

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice

A Spirited and Swiftly Moving Romance of Hearts and High Society, by the Greatest Living Master of Fiction

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

Dick Quarren, society idler and spendthrift, but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Strelsa Leeds. She has had one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her advent into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wycherly, wins an hour out of her life as a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do. She tells him there can be nothing serious between them, but she asks him to always think well of her. She bids him good-by, for work. Upon her return she takes tea with Mrs. Sprowl, who urges her to marry Sir Charles Mallison, Mrs. Sprowl believes Quarren for dropping out of society. The Dankmere galleries are opened and Quarren takes a few days off at Witch-Hollow. Strelsa tells him she is to marry Langly Sprowl. He tells her that he loves her and will not give her up.

"WELL," answered Dankmere, "he asked me if I knew more about anything than I did about pictures. I didn't catch his drift for about an hour—but then it came to me, and I got out of my chair and walked over and punched his head. I don't think he'll come back, do you?"

"I don't. What else have you been doing?" asked Quarren sagely.

"Nothing. One picture—the Raeburn portrait—had a bad hole in it."

"How did it happen?"

"Father extraordinary thing, that! I was giving a most respectable card party—some ladies and gentlemen of sorts from the Winter Garden, I believe—and one of the ladies inadvertently shied a glass at another lady——"

"For heaven's sake, Dankmere!"—

"Quite right, old chap—my fault entirely—I won't do it again. But do you know, the gallery already has become a popular resort. People are coming and going all day—a lot of dealers among them, I suspect—and there have been a number of theatrical people who want to hire pictures for certain productions to be staged next Winter——"

"We don't want that sort of thing!"

"That's what I thought; but there was one very fetching girl who opens in 'Ancestors' next October——"

"No, no, no!"

"Right-o! I'll tell her at luncheon . . . I say, Quarren, Karl Vanguard wants the gallery tonight. May I let him have it?"

"Certainly. What for?"

"Oh, some idea of his—I've forgotten what he said."

"I believe I'd better come down," said Quarren bluntly.

"Don't dream of it, old fellow. Everything is doing nicely. My respects to the fair. Bye-the-bye—anything in my line up there?"

Quarren laughed.

"I'm afraid not Dankmere."

"Very well" and the Earl airily "I'm not worrying now, you know. Good-bye, old sport."

And he rang off.

Quarren, hooting Molly in the hall, said:

"I think I'd better leave this afternoon, Dankmere is messing matters."

He Shrugged

"Are you going to run away?" she said in a low voice, glancing nervously at the open door that just passed them, wearing her riding habit."

"Run away?" he repeated, also lowering his voice. "From whom?"

"From Langly Sprowl."

He shrugged and looked out of the window.

"It is running away," insisted his pretty hostess. "You have a chance, I think."

"Not the slightest."

"You are wrong. Strelsa wept in her sleep all night. How does that strike you?"

"Not over mine," he said grimly; but he added: "How do you know she did?"

"Her maid told mine," admitted Molly shamelessly. "Now if you are going to criticise my channels of information I'll remind you that Richelieu himself——"

"Oh, Molly! Molly- What a funny girl you are!" he said laughing. "You're a sweet, loyal little thing, too—but there's no use"——

His face became expressionless, almost haggard—"there's no use," he repeated, under his breath.

Slowly side by side, they walked out to the veranda, her hand resting lightly just within the crook of his arm, he absent-mindedly filling his pipe.

"Strelsa likes you" she said.

"With all the ardor and devotion of a fish," he returned coolly.

"His?"

"What?"

A Plea for Quiet

"Do you know," said Molly thoughtfully, "she is a sort of a fish. She has the emotions of a mollusc as far as your sex are concerned. Some women are that way, more women than men would care to believe. . . . Do you know, Ricky, if you'll let us alone it is quite natural for us to remain indifferent to considerations of that sort?"

She stood watching the young fellow busy with his pipe.

"It's only when you keep at us long enough that we respond," she said. "Some of us are quickly responsive; it takes many of us a long while to catch fire. Threatened emotion instinctively repels many of us—the more fastidious among us, the finer grained and more delicately nerved, are essentially reserved. Modesty, pride, a natural aloofness, are as much a part of many women as their noses and fingers."

The Old-Fashioned Girl

"What becomes of modesty and pride when a girl marries for money?" he asked coolly.

"Some women give and accept in cold blood what it would be impossible for them to accord to a more intimate and emotional demand."

"No doubt an ethical distinction," he said, "but not very clear to me."

"I did not argue that such women are admirable or accountable. . . . But how many modern marriages in our particular vicinity are marriages of inclination, Ricky?"

"You're a washed-out lot," he said—"you're satiated as schoolgirls. If you have any emotions left they're twisted ones by the time you are introduced. Most debutantes of your sort make their bow equipped for business, and with the experience of what, practically, has amounted to several seasons."

"If any old-fashioned young girls remain in your orbit I don't know where to find them. Why, do you suppose any young girl, not yet out, would bother to go to a party of any sort where there was not champagne and a theatre box and a supper in prospect? That's the comment on your children, Molly, but you know it's true and no does everybody who pretends to know anything about it."

"You talk like Karl Westguard," she said laughing. "Anyway, what has all this to do with you and Strelsa Leeds?"

"Nothing." He shrugged. "She is part of your last word in social civilization"——

"She is a very normal, sensitive, proud girl, who has known little except unhappiness all her life. She —including two years of married misery—two years of horror. And you forget that those two years were the result of a demand purely and brutally emotional—to which, a novice, utterly ignorant, she yielded—pushed on by her mother.

"Please be fair to her; remember that her childhood was pinched with poverty, that her girlhood in school was a lonely one, embarrassed by lack of everything which her fashionable schoolmates had as matters of course.

"She could not go to the homes of her schoolmates in vacation times, because she could not ask them, in turn, to her own. She was still in school when Reggie Leeds saw her—and misbehaved — and she poor little thing was sent home, guiltless, but already half-damned. No wonder her mother chased Reggie Leeds half around the world, dragging her daughter by the wrist."

Another Way Out

"Did it make matters any better to force that drunken cad into a marriage?" asked Quarren coldly.

"It makes another marriage possible for Strelsa."

Quarren gazed out across the country where a fine misty rain was still falling. Acres of clover stretched away silvered with powdery moisture; robins and bluebirds covered the soaked lawns, and their spirited call notes prophesied blue skies.

"It doesn't make any difference one way or the other," said Quarren, half to himself. "She will go on in the predestined orbit——"

"Not if a stronger body pulls her out of it."

"There is nothing to which she responds—except what I have not"

"Make what you possess more powerful, then."

"What do I possess?"

"Kindness. And also manhood, Ricky. Don't you?"

Perhaps so — now — after a fashion. . . . But I am not the man who could ever attract her——"

"Make her up and find out."

"Make her?"

"Didn't I tell you that many of us are asleep, and that few of us awake easily? Didn't I tell you that nobody likes to be awakened from the warm comfort and idle security of emotionless slumber?—that it is the instinct of many of us to resist—just as I hear my maid mere"——he half wheeled toward Quarren, eyes slightly bulging without a shadow of expression on his sleek, narrow face.

Molly flushed; Quarren glanced at Sprowl, amazed at his insolence out of a clear sky.

"What?" he said slowly—then stepped back a pace as Strelsa passed close in front of him, apparently perfectly unconscious of any discord.

"Will you get me a lump of sugar, Mr. Quarren? My mare must be pampered or she'll start that jingling Kentucky amble and never walk one step."

Quarren swung on his heel and entered the house; Molly, ignoring Strelsa, turned sharply to Sprowl.

"If you are insolent to my guests you need not come here," she said briefly.

Langly's restless eyes protruded; he glanced from Molly to Strelsa, then his indifferent gaze wandered over the landscape. It was plain that the rebuke had not made the slightest impression. Molly looked angrily at Strelsa, but the latter, eyes averted, was gazing at her horse. And when Quarren came back with a handful of sugar she took it and, descending the steps, fed it, lump by lump to the two horses.

Who's Who in "The Streets of Ascalon"

STRELSA LEEDS—A charming young widow, who comes to New York and is sponsored by one of the leaders of society.

RICHARD QUARREN—A gifted young idler, who falls in love with Strelsa.

LANGLY SPROWL—A multi-millionaire, who has determined to marry Strelsa, and who has explained his unsavory past to her by a seemingly frank talk.

SIR CHARLES MALLISON—A rich Englishman, who has long hoped to win Strelsa's heart.

MARY LEDWITH—Who, betrayed by Sprowl, at last sees the good in Chester Ledwith, the husband she tossed aside.

THE EARL OF DANKMERE—Who brings over a lot of family pictures and incidentally starts Quarren on the road to usefulness.

MOLLY WYCHERLY—A great friend of Strelsa's, who breaks to Quarren the news that the young widow has lost all her money.

MRS. SPROWL—A Fifth avenue dowager, who undertakes a matrimonial campaign for Strelsa, hoping to marry her to Sir Charles Mallison.

THE WILD GOOSE

ROMANCE OF FASCINATING BUT FICKLE WIFE

By Gouverneur Morris

This romance has been made into a stirring motion picture by Cosmopolitan Production under the masterly direction of Albert Capellani.

Copyright, 1919, International Magazine Co.

THEN occasionally flashing, touch he followed a path which he had exploded earlier in the day, and which led to the edge of the little clearing in which Penn's house stood. At that point he sat down to wait until one hour and a half after all the lights in Penn's house had been extinguished. But, since he had eaten nothing from early morning, hunger did not know that it was hunger disturbing him and made him restless.

Gradually the forest became alive with the noises of the little things that walk stealthily at night. A little screech owl shrouded, but flew away after a little. The air had turned very brisk and exhilarating.

About 8 o'clock a light shone in the window of Tam's room. Now and then a shadow, as of something vast and spectral, came between its light and the window. Manners shook and trembled feebly like a man with a chill. He strained every faculty to try and catch a sound of her voice. But could not.

"How often," he thought, "when she was a baby I have taken her in my arms and walked about the garden paths at dusk. She could see things in the bushes and behind them that I could not see. Pixies, gnomes, Rewards, and Fairies most of all. How she would gurgle at them! How her great eyes would shine!"

The light in her window went out.

"What does God think of all this?" he wondered. "Here sit I alone in the cool. Yonder in the warm house my wife sits with another man. Her body has no secrets from him. For whole days I have passed up and down before the High tribunal of my own conscience, turning as I passed that nothing of me might be hid. I have done wrong. I have been a fool. But I have done nothing which in any way justifies the torture to which I have been subjected."——

His meditation suited into argument and interrogation half-earnest, half-whimsical.

"Almighty God," he thought, "if you are almighty, why are you also called all-merciful? Is it all-merciful to treat a poor little shrimp like me quite so rough? I don't say that it isn't. I ask for information. This world is full of sick. The sickest of all these are those who are sick at heart. Was it all-merciful when you decreed that disease should be contagious instead of health, and that wretchedness and unhappiness should be the common lot, and dirt and poverty and envy and lust? You are called also the All-Wise. Are you then still in an experimental mood, oh, God?"

The author is not so presumptuous as to say that a sign was not immediately given. He is not so presumptuous as to say that one was. But records only that in the very next crumb of time a star, dizzy perhaps with its own prehensile, lost its balance, and fell from the heavens. For a moment a long train of fiery sparks marked the splendor of the path along which it had whirled to extinction.

I do not know if Manners' reanimation was actually shaken or not. I think that the coincidence must have disturbed him a little, for he said to himself, as if to justify himself:

"That sort of sign was all right in the first century, but it is too old-fashioned for the twentieth. Give me a sign that I can understand—something simple and direct like—like striking me dead."

Somehow he wished he hadn't said that, even to himself. It had a flippant if not blasphemous effect upon his sense of fitness.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance. Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

A STORY OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"NO, I wouldn't hesitate a moment! But you're a Harrison. I've met the Harrison pride before, Phoebe."

"The Harrison pride!" Phoebe quoted scornfully. "The Harrisons can love, too. Anne, have you thought of that? Do you think anything would have kept Jim from marrying you?"

"No, Phoebe," I said in a voice that threatened to break.

The thought of how Jim had loved me in the dear old days was almost more than I could bear now when I was enduring our strange separation and wondering whether it would be possible for him to put half a world and a merciless secret between us if he cared for me at all.

"Well, nothing can keep me from marrying Neal—that is, nothing but Neal himself. I'd marry him to-morrow. I wanted to marry him the minute he was hurt. That would have given the right to take care of him. I offered, but he wouldn't. We had a pretty bad time. He was terribly upset."

"Oh—so that's when his wound started bleeding internally," I cried.

When I heard myself say it, I was bitterly ashamed of the mental weakness and physical weariness which caused me to express myself so carelessly. Naturally, it would be torture to Phoebe to remember that she had been the cause of Neal's relapse. So to have me put it in words like this must seem almost brutal.

"I'm so sorry I said that," I cried, in great contrition.

"It doesn't matter," said Phoebe, gently. "All that matters is that Neal won't marry me. It isn't just on account of this rather of yours, though that gives Neal this excuse without humiliating me. But it's still more because you need him."

"That must make you feel very unkindly toward me, Phoebe," I sighed. "And I don't blame you a bit. But I'll persuade Neal that I don't need him, and that it would make me happy to see you married."

"Again Phoebe smiled, but this time it was with warmth and sweetness. She came over to the couch where I was reclining among the cushions and put her soft, young lips to my cheek.

"I hoped you'd say that. I wanted to be sure that you're sweet and as devoted to Neal as he is to you. But you're wrong about not needing him. Anne. With Jim away on his strange mission and Father Andrew called home for some grave reason, Neal has no right to marry. I stayed awake all night last night and thought it out. I know heaps better than ever before what a wonderful darling my Neal is. Now I'll wait a hundred years for him without a whimper, but I'll never again try to persuade him to marry me until he thinks it's right."

Hawaii Sends Only Her Choicest Fruit to You

Hawaiian Crushed or Grated Pineapple

Aboard a liner, San Francisco bound out of Honolulu, you could enjoy the luxury of sun-ripened pineapple freshpicked from Hawaiian fields.

Before your ship reached San Francisco Harbor, much of the fruit's native lusciousness and flavor would be gone.

The only way you can get real, sunripened pineapple outside the boundaries of Hawaii is to buy Hawaiian Canned Pineapple at your grocer's.

This is fruit which has been allowed to mature naturally in the sun-drenched fields. Harvested in its prime, it is sealed safe in its shining, clean containers before sundown that same day.

Your grocer has Hawaiian Crushed or Grated Pineapple in assorted sizes to suit your needs. Order six or a dozen tins from him today.

Serve it as dessert just as it comes from the container. It makes a most delicious dish. Use it for baking pies, making tarts, cakes, sherbets, salads and puddings.

Send for our recipe book containing many hints for using Hawaiian Crushed or Grated Pineapple.

ASSOCIATION OF HAWAIIAN PINEAPPLE PACKERS

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

When you read in the newspapers that Thomas W. Lamont, or Charles M. Schwab, or Daniel Guggenheim, or Charles H. Sabin, or Edward L. Doheny, or Samuel M. Vauclain, or Owen D. Young, or Paul M. Warburg, or Robert Dollar, or A. C. Bedford, or James B. Duke, or Festus J. Wade, or Irving T. Bush, or Lewis E. Pierson, or John Sprague, or John H. Patterson has "left for a trip to Europe," don't rush to the conclusion that pleasure is the only object in view.

* * *

Nearly every salesman in America occasionally finds it advisable to run across the Atlantic to put through some important deal.

As a matter of fact, some of the biggest financial and business feats in recent years were accomplished by alert financial and business leadership in this country who saw "Opportunity" at the other side of the ocean and hastened across to embrace it.

* * *

Easily the most momentous financial coup brought off in recent years was the winning of the fiscal agency in this country of the British government and her Allies during the war. Henry P. Davison was the Morgan partner who spotted this unparalleled opportunity to hook business calculated to yield many millions of dollars in commissions, to say nothing of international prestige. Davison didn't attempt to handle the deal from a desk at the corner of Wall and Broad streets. He jumped on a fast boat, interviewed the proper British authorities, and came back with that historic contract in his pocket. This contract, which entailed the handling of many millions of dollars, proved so lucrative that the Morgan partners do not now know what to do with their money.

* * *

Schwab likewise didn't book his gigantic war orders from the British government by staying at home. Earl Kitchener, who had just been installed as head of the War Department, sent his friend Schwab a brief cable asking if he could hurry to London. Within twenty-four hours Schwab was at sea. Special arrangements were made at the other side to rush the American ordnance builder to London, and Kitchener was waiting to receive him the moment he reached the war office. Kitchener, with his characteristic bluntness, told Schwab what the British were up against, outlined some of their most urgent needs, and asked Schwab how far he could go in helping them out. Schwab's reply almost took Kitchener's breath away, so much was the head of Bethlehem Steel prepared to do in a hurry. Prices were the last thing mentioned.

That was how perhaps the largest deal of its kind in history was carried out.

* * *

When the American tobacco king, James B. Duke, wanted to become a dominant factor in the European tobacco industry he didn't confine himself with sitting in his New York office and handling things at long range. He betook himself to London, personally surveyed the whole situation, visited certain leading tobacco works, and in two or three weeks entrenched himself so strongly that the other tobacco people found it expedient to seek peace. The upshot was that Duke became as powerful a factor in Europe as he was and is in the United States.

* * *

Sam Vauclain, the indefatigable head of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, finding that his European "prospects" hadn't the ready cash to pay for the locomotives they very badly needed, shot across the Atlantic and, by a series of deals savoring of old-fashioned barter, was able to arrange for payment for fat orders.

* * *

John H. Patterson, although seventy-five years of age, went to Europe some months ago and has duplicated effective selling work, despite the depressing financial and business conditions, that the business has boomed ever since.

* * *

It was largely because of the super-salesmanship he exercised in foreign fields that James A. Farrell made such a name for himself that he became recognized as the ideal man for the presidency of the United States Steel Corporation. Farrell was no fireside business soldier.

The story of how George A. Gaston gained entree to the British War office and booked colossal war orders at the very outbreak of hostilities is well known.

* * *

Robert Dollar, the tremendously successful lumber and steamship magnate, has for many years travelled the equivalent of all around the globe every year, always on business bent.

Some of the most momentous oil battles of recent years have been fought not in this country, but abroad, by such stalwarts as Edward L. Doheny and Henry M. Sinclair.

Such banking leaders as Charles H. Sabin, Lewis E. Pierson, Seward Prosser, Charles E. Mitchell, Paul M. Warburg and others have all found it necessary to cross the ocean in the building up of their organizations.

* * *

Hereafter, when you read, even in the society columns, that Mr. So-and-So sailed yesterday for a pleasure trip to Europe, don't be too sure that he has gone simply to enjoy a month or two sight-seeing, for the chances are that he has some big business deal simmering at the back of his head. Super-salesmanship frequently demands travel.

Stocks Strong in New York at Noon; Money 5½% and Sterling Higher

RAILS ADVANCE IN A DULL MARKET

Oils Up a Little and Steels Gain Ground After Weak Start

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

Stocks were dull at noon in New York, but gains were small in most instances. Prices reached the highest morning level at the end of the first hour. Rails advanced the most as a class. Oils were up a little and certain shares gained some ground after a weak start. The market was dull, first hour transaction only totalling more than 300,000 shares. Call loans renewed at 5½ per cent. Foreign exchange had a better tone, demand sterling opening with a quarter cent gain at $4.58¾.

Among strongest issues were New York Central, Northern Pacific, Reading, Great Northern preferred, Canadian Pacific, Famous Players, General Electric, Goodrich, International Paper, Baldwin, Chandler, Mexican Petroleum and Royal Dutch. They were up from one to more than two points.

VERY QUIET OPENING.

Stocks opened in very quiet operating and the price movement was irregular at the outset and during the first hour. Rails showed the most gain, more than a point, and most of the issues which have been very active in recent days showed the most initial strength but business in earnest was not forthcoming. Trading was largely confined to Doheny issues, and they were firm. Liggett & Myers advanced seven points on its first sale this week, but little was done in tobaccos. Sumatra sold a shade lower. Studebaker was the only motor in which there was much interest, but they were a firm group. Steels were weak, with Crucible, Bethlehem B and U. S. Steel monopolizing interest. American Sugar was the only issue of its kind to command attention and it went off a fraction. There was nothing doing in coppers. Tires had good support. By mid-morning the market had a more improved tone, and most of the active issues were up.

NO INTEREST IN STOCKS.

The public is showing less interest in the stock market than for years. Transactions on the New York exchange yesterday made the smallest total for a five-hour session, with two exceptions last year, since 1917. This is due to trade conditions and also to the money situation. The latter is becoming more favorable. The Federal Reserve statement for this week is of a gratifying character. The reserve ratio is 62.5 against 61.6 a week ago, with Boston still leading at 78.4 as compared with 76.1, and New York advancing from 58.7 to 59.0. The gold reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve system climbed in a week from 78.5 per cent. to 80.6 per cent. The latter figure compares with 48.5 per cent. at a corresponding time last year. Governmental discount rates both in England and this country are now deemed on a normal basis.

Canal Traffic Slackens

Commercial traffic through the Panama Canal reflects business depression as much as railroad reports. During June it was the smallest for the fiscal year ended by that month. The big ditch was used but by 159 merchant ships as compared with 219 in the preceding month and 201 in June, 1920, while tolls collected were $751,947 against $835,500 in May and $711,268 in the preceding June. Despite the falling off in traffic during the last three months, tolls for the year amounted to $11,276,899 against $8,513,923 for the preceding twelve months.

Mexico May Seize 3,000 Mines

It is reported from Mexico City that there are nearly 3,000 mines in Mexico which have become liable to seizure by the Obregon government on the grounds that they have not paid taxes. There are about 70,000 mines in that country, including undeveloped properties. Owners of many promising prospects have been unable to meet tax assessments and have seen their properties forfeited.

Corporation Reports

Hudson & Manhattan shows net corporate deficit of $1,008,369 for 1920 against surplus of $20,000 in 1919.

Profits from the real estate department of the United Cigar Stores Company of America from the real estate department for the 1920 fiscal year were $1,000,000, as against $1,258,822 in the corresponding period of 1920, an decrease of $470,099, or 120 per cent.

Second quarter earnings of the Famous Players Lasky Corporation are expected to show net profits after taxes of $1,500,000.

For the June quarter the Stutz Motor Car Company of America reports net profits of $1,000,000. There was a deficit of $58,501 at the March 31 quarter the deficit was $102,201.

For the month of June the Cities Service Company reports gross income of $823,783, against $1,120,264 in the May period. Net earnings were $783,187 against $2,073,714, and the surplus after charges for dividends was $612,566 against $2,002,842.

The Royal Dutch Company reports for 1921 net income, after expenses and taxes, of 129,350,864 florins, against 100,099,883 florins in 1920.

Republic Iron & Steel reports for the June quarter net earnings of $2,000,000, after charges of $88,000, leaving a surplus of $104,611 for the preceding quarter.

Railroad Items

The Interstate Commerce Commission's tentative valuation of $17,326,000 for Toledo, St. Louis & Western as of June 30, 1918, includes $1,000,000 for the road as a going concern.

Southern Pacific gross decreased $1,221,000 in June but showed an increase of $563,897 in net. Gains for six months were $4,000,000 gross, and $2,000,000 net.

Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific officials have announced a reduction of 10 per cent. in the salaries of all executive officers.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized the Missouri Pacific to issue $5,000,000 first and refunding mortgage bonds and to sell these bonds at not less than 90 or to deliver them to the road as collateral security for loans.

Litigation Adjusted

The litigation between Reporter, Lant & Co. and the Metropolitan Trust Company has been amicably adjusted and the former company will occupy its new quarters at No. 21 Milk street on Monday, August 1.

STOCKS' FUTURE DEPENDS ON BUSINESS

Evans Sees Indications That Trade Revivals in Fall Will Be Inevitable

By B. C. EVANS.

Chicago, July 22.—In the intervals of watching a stock go down that ought to go up, a prominent broker and successful investor remarks that "nothing can hurt stocks but decline in business." Some of the companies themselves," meaning that the technical position of the stock list is a strong one, but that business but short selling, he declares, the liquidation has substantially been completed. Then notes the small amount of stocks on margin, naming several prominent issues which his firm has on its books.

The future of stocks and bonds therefore depends on the activities of business in general, hence that is the point for readers to study most assiduously. There is a somewhat more hopeful feeling among personal contact with the inside of affairs, men who do not think it is necessary to say a bullish word in order to get better whether they believe it or not, but the general tone is confined with interests which are specially fortunate. And then we know that in any such period of depression as we are now passing through there are many little starts upward before any big upward movement.

GAINS IN PAIL LIKELY.

For the present the reduction in the discount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco and the probability that Chicago will take similar action today, should be regarded as a phenomenon occurring after business has reached a certain degrees of depression and the conditions best described by the word dullness. This view is especially reasonable in view of the fact that the Bank of England has also reduced its rate to 5½ per cent.

But the need and desire to do many things may be such that this concession to borrowers will stimulate activity. If so, we may look for gains in business to show themselves in September and October.

But since Europe is what ails us, we had better look sharp in that direction. Today sterling checks are selling at 3.67¾. One authority on this city expressed the opinion that the price will go to 3.75.

POVERTY AND ARMAMENT.

Possibly the usual reasons given for low rates on European exchange, that is balance of trade and indebtedness to us, he emphasizes the extreme pauperization of Europe as a remarks "good enough for now, but long as they expend half their income in armaments."

He relates a recent conversation with a European banker. To test the latter's feeling as to stability he asked "What would you think of remitting all these debts of Europe to the United States?" "Don't be a fool," was the reply. "If my country had any money today she would pay it over tomorrow." Then the Chicago man notes that many of the moneys of Europe are so cheap that bankers will not compromise their dignity by dealing in them.

A quotation of 20 Polish marks for a cent on an actual transaction which he cited bears out that view of the case. Then a maid in a Chicago family, who has brought over a hoard of Austrian money, hands out the kroner to her friends as curiosities and offers to dispose of all she has at zero per.

SLAP IN THE FACE.

Occasionally when our hopes of "good times coming" get too giddy these facts from Europe give us an unpleasant slap in the face. Accordingly we should be careful not to count too much on any improvement here. Poverty across the Atlantic means small purchases of our products. The wealth of the world tends toward the United States, but there is not so much wealth as there was. In all this point of disappointing this incident ranks as one of the greatest bank failures in this country, as the Great Lakes affair in this city was not a failure but a retirement from business, and the Michigan Avenue Trust Company had deposits of but $1,500,000. It was not a bank in any real sense but a mere shop for marketing automobile paper, nor did it clear directly or indirectly with the clearing house or have any relations with other banks. The financial misfortunes we have had are minute specks of dirt on the ledger of the United States.

UPWARD TREND TO BOSTON LEADERS

Local Market Is Irregular, but Its Tone Improves; Curb List Soon Weakens

Irregularity characterized the Boston market all the morning. At the opening most of the active issues were lower, but before the forenoon was over the situation was reversed, the movement here reflecting an improvement in New York. Trading was dull, narrow and featureless. During the first hour Calumet & Hecla advanced 3, General Electric 2¾, Swift & Co. 2¼ and Mexican Investment, Edison recorded a point and Westinghouse first preferred 1½. Waltham Watch preferred sold at a new high for the year.

Fractional gains were made in American Telephone, Boston & Maine, United Shoe, National Leather, Lima and Atlantic Gulf. Lone Star Gas receded a little were Calumet & Arizona, U. S. Smelting, Cannon, Waldorf, International Products and Waltham Watch preferred.

CURB SOON WEAKENED.

The curb market was irregular to changes at the opening, but grew weak quickly. The bulk of trading was dull. Low issues, with Boston & Montana and Eureka hilling the lead. At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was off 2 cents at 65 cents, Alpha 1 cent at 72 cents, Mutual 2 cents at 34 cents and Vermont Nines 1 cent at 21 cents. Crystal recovered a cent loss and Eureka lost a 2-cent gain.

NEWS AND HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF MOTION PICTURES

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

COVIET Russia is making official use of the motion picture, according to Julius Kohner, editor of the Czechoslovakian Filmeban, who came to this country a short time ago with a set of films which, it is rumored, will be released here next Fall.

In spite of the general unrest in Russia, the dramatic entertainment stands as quite the highest in any country. This is also true, evidently, of the motion picture entertainment. Trains equipped with projection machines are being run throughout the country, giving exhibitions at each station, then moving on.

More than 3,000 movie theatres have been built there within the past two years and pictures are being imported weekly in large quantities. As yet there is little or no production of pictures there, and American films are the most commonly shown.

DIANA ALLEN PRESENTS CUP

THE heroine of the evening at Delmonico's last night was Diana Allen, the Cosmopolitan player, who presented the dancing cup to the winners of the contest held there. These "Photoplayers' Nights," which are regular Thursday night affairs, have proved a huge success, following on the same series of entertainments in Los Angeles.

Last week the winners of the cup were Frances White and her partner, Ray Long. The featured guests were Mr. and Mrs. Conway Tearle—Mrs. Tearle is Adele Rowland behind the footlights—while others present were Marguerite Clark, Teddy Sampson, Elaine Hammerstein, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bergan and Mr. W. A. Brady.

WALLACE REID AT CONEY ISLAND

WALLACE REID, after having raced New York on motor-cycles, he came on from the coast some weeks ago to co-star with Elsie Ferguson in "Peter Ibbetson," caused one long, lingering sensation at Coney Island before he boarded the train for Hollywood. The other day he paid a visit to Luna Park, and Luna Park hasn't done such rushing business since it opened.

He was followed by a horde of admiring girls who refused to be left behind. "Wally" Witched the Waves, Whipped the Whirl, Hellotered the Skeiter, Shot the chutes, Scrambled the Scrambler and Frisked the Frolic, and the admiring hordes Wliched, Whipped, Hellotered, Shot, Scrambled and Frisked after him.

Photographers rushed around clicking cameras and turning the cranks, while their "seconds" were busy taking orders for the finished pictures. The owners of the various shows at Coney Island are busy figuring how they can lure another movie star down as a "bally-hoo."

BRABIN'S RETURN.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES G. BRABIN have returned to New York from their honeymoon in Nova Scotia on the Bay of Fundy. Mrs. Brabin, by the way, is better known as Theda Bara.

Each Summer the Brabins will spend a few weeks on the Bay of Fundy, where they have bought a home. At present Mr. Brabin is one on the Fox sets, where his megaphone is waiting for him.

NAZIMOVA WANTS A STORY.

OUT in Hollywood Madame Nazimova is finishing work on the editing and cutting of the last Metro special, "Camille." It will be ready, according to that company, in about two weeks. Meanwhile Nazimova is casting about for a good story for her independent productions. She wants something unusual, something with a big purpose. The great difficulty so far in regard to the story she has considered is the question of censorship. According to last reports, she has in mind a play with a cast composed entirely of women. This has, doubtless, been given up.

CAMERA CLICKS.

GLORIA SWANSON has just finished her second starring picture, "Under the Lash." In this picture she doesn't wear a modern costume. This will be a departure from her usual type picture, in which she usually has the most fantastic costumes designed for her. In "Under the Lash" she portrays the character of a South African farmer's wife.

MAN MISSING 16 YEARS IS SOUGHT IN BOSTON

Charles Marens of No. 4211 Viola street, Philadelphia, has appealed to the Boston American to assist him in a search for his uncle. The uncle is known as either Samuel Forrest or Samuel Bertnick, and has not been seen by Marens for sixteen years.

Marens, together with his brother, mother and father, came to America from Russia in 1905. At that time they were not in San Francisco by their ance. A family quarrel took place shortly after and the Marens family returned to Russia where the father died. Eight years ago the two boys and their mother returned to America and the search for their uncle, twin brother of their mother, has been on since.

Cats That Spread Disease—

And Other Things

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

A New Jersey town decided to kill all stray cats; then ladies "fond of little kitty," appeared, and the cat-destroying ordinance was killed. Stray cats, roaming about, collect diseases in their fur, and exchange germs with cats that come out and go back to play with children. Health officers tell you there is no hope of conquering diphtheria, scarlet fever and some other children's diseases until the "pretty kitty" problem is solved.

London cables that the Allies will ask the United States "to end discord in Silesia," which means asking Uncle Sam to put his finger between the door and the jamb. The Allies, it is to be hoped, will find a large, plainly written NO awaiting them.

The New York Times, observing that President Harding "is taking the helm of Congress," says the President is bound to boss things because the Senate is "leaderless." It is fortunate for the country that Mr. Harding is taking hold and steering. The nation had drifted about long enough. But the Senate is not "leaderless." It has in Hiram Johnson one of the most powerful, able, honest and as intelligent leaders ever developed in any country. But a leader must have a worthy following to be useful. And while the Senate has a first-class leader in Hiram Johnson, it hasn't material to supply him with much of a following. A dozen very able men are there—not enough to give life to ninety-six.

A big Georgia peach grower says that thanks to Postmaster-General Hays, peaches can now be sent by parcel post. They are delivered promptly, and can be picked ripe instead of being picked green to ripen on the road. This development of the parcel post, enabling farmers to build up a retail trade, get the full retail price for their goods, with prompt delivery, will do as much for the farms as any one thing could do.

The old locomotive, "DeWitt Clinton," first ever used on the New York Central, is sent to Chicago. Under its own power, it grunts along at fifteen miles per hour. On the Chicago journey it is pulled by locomotive 999, speed record of more than 112 miles per hour. Locomotives have been improved, but railroading is primitive, too much stock watering, government subsidizing, public robbing, too little progress. The average freight car travels less than thirty miles in twenty-four hours. The old "DeWitt Clinton" could beat that several hundred per cent.

In Germany you can take an airplane trip for $2.50. The government encourages and develops flying. Regular flying timetables are printed and the flying ships are punctual.

The United States, which invented flying, alone among nations of any importance, utterly neglects the most important modern invention, weapon and protection. That neglect is a crime against the people of this country.

The Irish question is not easily settled. A few days ago it was the South of Ireland, the Sinn Fein, fighting the British Empire, with every kind of weapon. Then came a prospect of some arrangement between De Valera and Lloyd George. Now the situation changes and you learn that the North of Ireland and the half-way independent government set up there will not consent to the arrangement that England would make with the South of Ireland. The trouble is not all in control of Ireland by England. Part of it is within Ireland's own boundaries, which may only be settled in the end by a civil war between the North and South.

How stupidly, wastefully, criminally and how usefully money can be spent. Our worse than useless, incompetent Shipping Board has wasted three hundred and eighty millions in the last year and, with honest, capable management under Lasker, it will take three hundred millions more to pay its debts.

For something over two hundred millions, the United States and Canada combined can build the great St. Lawrence Canal, connecting the Atlantic and all the oceans with the Great Lakes and all their cities.

The Government of the United States within a few years has been robbed of enough money to build all its canals, all its roads, irrigate its deserts, drain its swamps and add scores of billions to its national wealth. Those dollar-a-year patriots certainly made a clean job of it.

Taxes That Hobble Business

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Congress must be less alert to judge of public sentiment than it usually is if it fails to recognize the existence of a widespread demand among business men for the correction of our system of taxation before the complicated and time-consuming task of amending the tariff law is taken up.

The platform upon which the Republicans returned so triumphantly to power specifically recognized the need for a correction of the whole system of taxation when it declared for the substitution of "simple for complex tax laws and procedure; prompt and certain determination of the tax law for delay and uncertainty; tax laws which do not for tax laws which do excessively mulct the consumer or needlessly repress enterprise and thrift."

Today business languishes because of a number of hostile influences, but among these the continuance of the excess profit tax and the extreme surtaxes of war times are most readily recognized and most easily remedied.

While they fail utterly of their purpose of producing revenue, they are malignly successful in hobbling trade and industry and in checking individual enterprise.

Congress will meet a public demand, and the Republican majority will redeem its platform promise by putting the amendment of the tax laws ahead of any new tariff bill.

Results to Date of Prohibition

"What Has Prohibition Actually Accomplished to Date?" asked William Randolph Hearst editorially in the Boston American of July 3. One hundred dollars will be paid for the best answer of not more than 150 words.

Prophecy Fulfilled

Editor Boston American:

Prohibition is making the cornerstone of the edifice for the prosperity of our country. It is putting spirit in the constitution; intelligence in the brain; clothes on the children; flour in the empty barrel; wood on the fire, credit in the country, and money in the purse. If such are the present fruits, what will the harvest be?

What a crowning victory for our future generation. "Our great tomorrows." The Volstead Act is giving liberty, sooner or later, to the man who is bound by appetite, especially to those who want to preserve their "personal liberty" in alcohol.

ALICE SMITH.

Barrington, R. I.

Costly Experiment

Editor Boston American:

Prohibition's first accomplishment was to scrap millions of dollars worth of property, reduce the income of the government approximately a billion dollars a year, and put a million and a half people out of employment. Absorbed by war work, the immediate effect of destroying so many jobs was not noticed, neither was the loss of revenue while we were selling Liberty bonds. The deficit in income and the increasing menace of unemployment can be traced directly to the economic blunder of prohibition. Its compensations are nil, compared to the pressing need of getting people back to work before hungry stomachs precipitate a crisis that may develop into serious disturbances, if not revolution.

We must retrace our steps and provide a new method of distributing alcoholic beverages which eliminates the evils of the old type saloon and prohibition will soon be forgotten as a disagreeable and costly experiment.

THINKING IT OUT

To succeed you must think—use your head—consult your gray matter.

Some men have the time to think, and have private offices in which they are privileged to be alone and able to concentrate on any certain subject.

Other men are employed in such a capacity that they do not have private offices, and it becomes necessary to do the thinking in the home.

It is not because they do not love their families that they seem preoccupied, and it is not because of lack of interest in the individual members of their families that they ask to be left alone—they want to do undisturbed thinking.

The man who makes such a request probably finds it necessary to earn more money to support the family and has to think of a day to do it.

The "family" should be glad that the husband and father is planning ahead for their increased comfort and ultimate good.

The happy-go-lucky fellow believes in letting the tomorrow take care of itself, and perhaps this sort makes a more ideal family head from a social standpoint, but what about the future, the result of his irresponsibility?

Every worth while man has to think long and hard to make life a success for himself and all concerned, so don't object to the "time to think."

WORK, DOES IT PROVE CURSE OR BLESSING

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

IS work a curse or a blessing? Would you rather loaf or labor—or both? Of which would you rather have more, of toil or of rest?

Of course, you know how much harder it is to loaf wisely than it is to work well. A helpful, not to say a wise, use of leisure is a relatively rare achievement; whereas most of us accomplish even our mechanical tasks fairly efficiently. And this is not meant to be flattery, either!

So there cannot be much doubt which is better for us, work or play. That calls to mind the little boy who was told to take a pill for a passing illness. When he protested, his mother urged that the dose was good for him. To which he answered: "How do you know You ain't me!"

Stern Necessity

At any rate, whether we wish it or not, work is imposed upon us by stern necessity. Neither God nor Nature intends to let us work our way through life without working. Very few of us are in the privileged position of the prophet Elijah, whom the Lord commanded the ravens to feed.

It may be that the man of the millenium will emulate the lilies, and will neither toil nor spin. Meanwhile, however, both modern prophets and still more modern profiteers must either work or work others for their respective, respectable or unrespectable living.

All of which may sound foolish or high-schoolish, but was really suggested by our recent hearing of a lecture from a brilliant professor, who made himself the mouthpiece—one of many mouthpieces—of the fashionable discontent.

Said the professor, with dramatic irresponsibility, they always talk to us about the "joy of working"; there is no such thing; the man must be an ass who actually enjoys his work. Or words to that effect!

Stimulating Teacher

The professor in question shall be nameless here, for he is really a stimulating teacher and a highly entertaining lecturer, and earns a deserved livelihood, as he tours the country with his mental stimulus and entertainment.

But this sort of talk should be discouraged and censured. It is of a kind with that parlor bolshevism, which verbally fights the existing economic order, and offers a fool's paradise of communal dreams as a substitute for individual effort guided by superiors, who periodically rise, cream-like, out of the mass of us.

Indeed, this type of teacher is even more mischievous. Bolshevist Russia, whatever its shortcomings, at least seeks to enforce the doctrine of no work, no food. Whereas this doctrinaire plays down to the inherent laziness of men, and tries to make them loathe the very idea of labor, as the symbol of drudging slavery supposedly imposed upon them by exploiting capitalist masters.

Nonsense—and again nonsense! It is easy of course to rail against the present system; easier still to point out its obvious defects; easiest of all, to appeal to the general willingness to loaf.

Knowing that we shall not return to Eden, but shall continue to eat bread in the sweat of our face, it becomes the part of wisdom to make a virtue of the necessity of labor.

Mean the Same

No use, either, in playing with the words work and labor, as though one were desirable and the other undesirable. For our purpose, they mean the same.

Work, work—why not work? It is as tonic as it is necessary. That is sufficient reason for its glorification.

Manual laborers, mind workers, even mouth workers,—all are making mutual contributions as soldiers in the Army for the Common Good.

At present, these services are not so equitably rewarded, with financial equivalent, as, duly, they will be.

Meanwhile, happy the man who, with self-respect, sees his service in terms of the General Good, before which there is no great and no small.

In that godlike spirit, he can say: Behold my work. It is good!

THINGS WE LOVE TO TALK ABOUT

TABLOID FAIRY TALE

"Without looking toward the millinery window his wife rushed on and met him on time."

GERMANS GET BIG SHARE OF RUSSIAN TRADE

By Joseph Irwin France,

United States Senator from Maryland.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Baltimore Sun.)

Senator France entered Russia on June 30 and is now in Moscow. From England, via Antwerp, he passed through Belgium and Holland, through Essen into Germany, and from Berlin have now arrived by mail several articles dealing with German-Russian relations and the conditions which affect American trade. Senator France is the first American to gain entrance into Russia in many months. The second of his articles from Berlin follows. He will write his story of Russian conditions when he gets out.

BERLIN, June 22 (by mail).—Germany is wasting no time in debating the political consequences of resuming trade with Russia. She needs a foreign market for her manufactures to give work to German tradesmen and profits to German factories. She must have this trade for obvious economic reasons. Consequently, although communism is quite as repugnant to Germany as to America, Germany fails to see why this political consideration should affect Germany's need for immediate trade with a country which happens to be communist.

I have spent several days in pursuit of information on this subject, and while this time is not sufficient to supply all the evidence I wish, the unanimity of reports on Russian trade is significant—reports, I mean, on the Germans' pursuit of trade to replace that which was lost seven years ago. Reports of internal conditions in Russia itself are as ludicrously at variance here as in America.

Lion's Share to Germany

Specifically, I find agreement that Germany is getting the lion's share of Russian purchases, such as they are. The largest single transaction reported is in railway equipment, which Germans expect ultimately will amount to $150,000,000 gold. Against this German locomotive builders already have completed for delivery 100 locomotives, and a second group of 100 is at the moment being allotted to Krupp's and other plants.

But more interesting even than the prowess of Germany in shipping her exports do I find her energy in getting paid for them. It takes little daring to sell for gold. But this German-British group has succeeded in developing a substitute for gold—viz., the flax and hemp crop of the whole country south of the Baltic—a crop Western Europe is eager to import. I hear Hugo Stinnes named as the guiding spirit of this group, but that is not surprising. Almost every great enterprise is reputed to be the handiwork of the iron-master-financier; he is the local substitute for that mythical "Wall Street," to which our American soapbox orators love to refer as responsible for every enterprise requiring cash.

This inquiry of mine into Russian affairs I am extending somewhat so as to include the countries already on friendly terms with that country—in the position I wish America were. England's actual dealings are not readily explained, for England will long remain crippled from her recent disastrous strikes; she is not, however, entirely idle in Russia, Sweden and the border States are more active. But Germany seems to me most active and alert.

Reconstruction Under Way

Germany is, in brief, well informed that the war ended some time ago, and that the reconstruction period is begun. Purposely I entered by a route which would show me from the train not only that rich agricultural area which is a continuation of the fertile lands of Belgium and the Netherlands, but a typical industrial section as well. I was amazed at the trim, smiling fields of grain, as fine as ever I saw in any country, and with every foot of soil utilized; I saw not the slightest evidence that German soil is suffering from lack of anything that farm land needs. The enormous industrial district, centring at Essen but extended for miles and miles along the railways cutting the Ruhr Valley, was another surprise for astonishment. It is thriving—I wish Pittsburgh, the nearest American counterpart, looked as fit.

I do not mean that German industry is operating at capacity or anything like it. A mark worth a cent and a half won't buy in raw material or fuel or in labor what the twenty-five-cent mark did in 1914. But however much goes in grinding there may be now of the war's cost, German industry is buckling down and making progress well worth our emulation. The reward may be pitiably small, but work goes on.

And not the least of it is Germany's determination to recognize in Russia a good customer, and in Russia's economic restoration the salvation of a very sick world.
